His Anti-Revolutionary Bill is Rejected.

The Centrists Resent the Dictatorial Attitude of the Prus-sian Ministry.

Gen. von Schellendorff Says That Socialism is Picking at the Foundation of the Army-The Bundesrath.

Associated Press Leased-wire Service.

BERIAN, May 11.—(By Atlantic Cable, Associated Press Copyright, 1895.) In view of the rejection by the Reichstag of paragraph 111 of the Anti-revolutionary Bill, which practically sealed the fate of that measure, nobody was surprised when the Reichstag today, after rejecting paragraph 112, refused to further discuss the bill, and all its amendments were withdrawn. Then the entire bill, paragraph by paragraph, was rejected, without debate, and the Reichstag adjourned.

Though the rejection of the Anti-revolutionary Bill did not surprise anybody who has followed the popular agitation against, and, although the rejection yesterday of paragraph 111 hopelessly emasculated the

was to drag along for a time, as the government did not intend to withdraw the measure, although continuance of the debate only promised further humiliation for the government, therefore the coup de grace administered to the unpopular bill today was a relief to all concerned.

The most interesting speech during the discussion was that of Herr Groeber, which showed that the Center party was irritated against the government on account of its management of the bill. He said that Herr won Koeller, the Prussian Minister of the Interior, apparently regarded the Relubertag as an automatic machine, into which bills were put in order to be pulled out as laws on the other side. The utterances of Herr won Koeller in support of the bill, he ascerted, only put weapons in the hands of the Socialists. Herr Groeber then proceeded to protest against the dictatorial attitude assumed by Dr. Soboentath, the Prussian Minister of Justice, toward the Center party, and declared that the party would decline responsibility for the measure.

Dr. Soboentadt repiled in a speech which only certed to further embitter matters and to give the government at loggerheads with the Center party.

The procedure were samewast sufficient in the procedure was a smeasure of the procedure which only certed to further embitter matters and to give the government at loggerheads with the Center party.

The procedure were samewast sufficient in the procedure was an insult to the sharp would be the ministers' speeches. He declared that Herr you Keeller's speech was an insult to the ministers' speeches. He declared that Herr you Keeller's speech was an insult to the precident, Herr you Eulouburg, who remarked that it was the precident by the precident, Herr you Eulouburg, who remarked the it was the precident by the precident, Herr you Eulouburg, who remarked the it was the precident business to rebuke insules to the house. Herr you Keeller, and general applause, osientatiously applauded Dr. Sigl as the latter returned to his sext. Upon resuming business to a p iness today the Reichstag proceeded to use paragraph 112 of the Anti-revolu-ary B.ll.

von hardoff, Free Conservative, and Herr von Levetzow then announced on behalf of their respective parties that they would follow Gen. Brunseart von Schellendorf in supporting the government on paragraph 112 against the committee amendments. A decision was called for, and paragraph 112 was rejected. The Conservatives, Imperialists and National Liberals wited in the majority. The same paragraph was amended in committee, and was then put to a vote and was also rejected, the Centrists alone supporting it.

Herr yon Richter, the leader of the People's party, then remarked: "Let us abandon further debate so that by a division we may quickly rid the world of the whole thing."

The words of Herr Richter were greeted with much laughter and his advice was forthwith acted upon. Amid much excitement the various amendments were formally withdrawn and a curious scene ensued. The majority, in the gayest spirits, rejected each paragraph as it was put from the chair. When the last paragraph was disposed of, the anti-Semites and the members of the left cheered boisterously and the session was adjourned amid intense excitement until Monday, when the discussion upon the customs convention with Australia and the tobacco tax will be taken up.

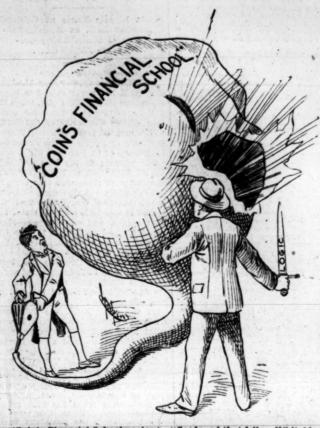

There is much discussion in political circles tonight at the unexpected expressed is that the Minister of the Interior, Herr von Koeller, must fall with the Anti-revolutionary Bill.

Herr Bronseart after the final vote had been taken on the Anti-revolutionary Bill, said: "Better thus than that the committee's bill had been defeated."

The Bundesrath convened promptly at the Reichstag building, Prince Holsenlohe presiding. At 19 o'clock (Saturday) the Bundesrath was in session. The correspondent of the Associated Fress heard a report emanating from semi-official courses to the effect that despite the rumors current in the lobby, it is still probable that a modification of the Anti-revolutionary Bill. Said: "Better thus than that the committee's bill had been defeated."

Nevertheless, he believed socialism was pleking at the foundation of this wall, and it was to prevent these attempts that the paragraph was intended.

Herr Bebel, Socialist, replied that the ruling circles evidently wished to provoke the Social Democracy to acts of violence in order to crush it by military force, but, he added, the Socialists did not intend to be entangéed into a snare.

Minister Hazelton is to Resign.

Admiral Meade Says He Was Drunk.

The Representative in Venezuela of Uncle Samuel Prefers Counter Charges.

He Says That the Testy Naval Of-ficer Refused to Pay His Re-spects to the Various Foreign Diplomats.

Associated Press Leaged-wire Gerales.
WASHINGTON, May 11.—Senoca Hazelton, United States Minister to Venezuela, who is in Washington, estensibly on leave of absence from his post, will not return to Venezuela. While Admiral Mesde was at Nicaragua with his squadron this spring at Nicaragius with his squadron this spring he had occasion to communicate with the United States Legation at Caracas, and subsequently reported to the President, who is said to have acted immediately, and this accounts for the Minister's sudden departure from Venezuela for Washington. Admiral Mende's report, according to persons who know what transpired at La Guayra, reflects severely upon the sorriety of the Minister, and asserts that briety of the Minister, and asserts that the business of the legation, almost from the date when he took charge, a year ago, has been conducted altogether by the secretary of the legation. Bartelman, who has been stationed at Caracas for the past five years.

Hazelton arrived here on Thursday, and has since been in consultation with the State and Navy Department officials. He has desired to present his side of the case to Secretary Gresham, but owing to the latter's sickness the conferences have been with Asaletant Secretary Uhl. The Minister has asked for a copy of the charges made by Admiral Meade, but the department has not felt at liberty to give them. When seen by a reporter of the Associated Press, Hazelton said:

"I wish to be entirely frank on this subject. I understand Admiral Meade has past five years. UNGAVA BAY INDIANS DIE OF Over One Hundred and Sixty of ject. I understand Admiral Meade has made a report containing serious charges against me, but I have not seen the report. It is doubtless due to the admiral feeling concerning events which happened during his recent visit to Venezue's. All did not go so smoothly as possible, and the admiral was much displeased with his visit. Before leaving I a Guayra he stated that he would report that I was drunk at the reception tendered him. This and other things may explain the animus of the charge. When the admiral was about to come to Caracas, I received a telephone message amouncing that he would arrive at 2 o'clock next day. With my secretary, Mr. Barteinsus, I at once made a fact of prominent officials to be called on and invited to the reception of the admiral. He went about from 4 to 10 o'clock delivering fautitations. Again we were busy with the work until 3 o'clock mext day, so when the admiral arrived at 2 o'clock I was almost eximusted.

"Mr. Crespo had designated 3 o'clock for calling on him. He accompanied the admiral on his call on the President. Then he preceded to call on members of the Cabinet. After several of these calls hed been made Admiral Meade grew impastent. He said it was improper for an admiral to be driving about making calls on the Cabinet. He had already made several calls, so I said to Admiral Meade that it would be a serious reflection on him if he failed to call after having seen their colleagues. I reminded him that I would have to remain in Venezuela after he left, and that I did not wish such an embarrassment to occur. He conserted to proceed. Then we ject. I understand Admiral Meade has made a report containing serious charges against me, but I have not seen the re-QUEBEC, May 11.—Official reports from the vicinity of Fort Chimo, a Hudson Bay trading-post, on Ungava Bay, show that two thirds of the entire tribe of Montagniae Indians trading at the port have perished of starvation in one season—over 160 in number. "Another irritation occurred as to calling on the foreign ministers. It had been arranged that we should call on the ministers of Italy, Spain, Germany and other countries represented and invite them to the reception of the admiral later. Mr. Bartelman gave this as the custom. But Admiral Meade positively declined to call on the foreign ministers. As a result they were not seen and none of them attended the reception given to the American admiral. These things had a tendency to anger the admiral, as I have said, and he threatened at La Guayra to make a report reflecting on me. As a matter of fact, I did everything I could to have his visit agreeably and duly honored. Contrary to reports, the Venezuelan government was not greatly impressed with the visit of Admiral Meade. He had expected the Cabinet to turn out to meet him. Two carriages were placed at his dispocal, but this was not sufficient for his party and I added other carriages at my own expense."

this was not sufficient for his party and I added other carriages at my own expense."

He was asked as to the report that his secretary had done the work of the Legation for the last year.

"I have been in constant attendance at the legation," said be, "being absent only once for four days, and then Mr. Bartelman accompanied me. I wished to make his work as agreeable as possible, and as his compensation was a meagre $1500 per year while mine is $7500, I asked him to my house where he was free from all expense, the only requirement being that he keep the general track of affairs."

After giving these and further details, Hazelton was asked the direct question: "Have you resigned?"

"I have not as yet," said he.

"Has the department asked for your resignation?"

"I am not at liberty to discuss the subject," said he.

Hazelton was informed that from other sources it had been learned that his resignation had been called for. He answered that it amounted to about that.

At the Venezuelan Legation much surplessantness on the occasion of Admiral Meade and the legation here has not been apprised that Hazelton had been ether than agreeable.

LONDON, May 11 .- (By Atlantic Cable Associated Press Copyright, 1895.) The Deautiful, healthy spring weather which Landoners have revelled in for some time past continues to the delight of everybody. This buge metropolis, as a reult, trowded, and the gayest possible senson is in full swing. The fashiomable trades-men are in their glory, and smiling faces everywhere bear testimony to the rush of business, rippling of society and fluttering of fashion, which are making the average West End shop-keeper breathe sighs of Seldom has London been graced by the Seidom has London been graced by the presence in town of so many members of the royal family. Royal personages, male and female, young and old, are to be seen in carriages and even on foot at every turn in the fashionable thoroughfares. For instance, London has not yet done talking of the fact that a few days tree the Prince of Wales and his hypother. ago the Prince of Wales and his bruther, the Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha (Duke of Edriburgh) followed by the Duke fo York, the heir presumptive, and his cousin. Prince Alfred of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, who is said to have been selected to marry fittle Queen Wilhelmira of Holkand when the proper time arrives, were seen strolling arm in arm through Pall Mail as calmly and contentedly as any every-day subject of Her Majesty. Then, again, some of the royal family are to be found nightly at the theixters, a fact which tends to increase the power of the attractions presented, for the visits of royalty to places of amusement are duly chronicled by the press, and naturally the general public wants to see ago the Prince of Wales and his brother irally the general public wants to it royalty has enjoyed.

of social engagements there is such a single list that even the society papers only find space for the most prominent. Among the latter is the grand dinner given on Thursday last by Mr. and Mrs. Nayfor Layland, nonor of the Prince of Wales. Of course, the Queen's drawing-room of Wednesday was the great event of the cea-son. The weather was delightful, a cool breeze was blowing and the result was the most brilliant royal display seen for a long time past. There was a triple file of carriages along the mail long before the hour fixed for the drawing-room, wait-ing to take their occupants to Bucking-ham Palace, and the vicinity of the Queen's London residence, was thronged with peo-London residence, was thronged with people anxious to get a glimpse of the dazsling show. It was noticeable that black

The Americans presented to Queen Victoria at the drawing-room were the widow of the late Senstor Hearst of California, who was presented in the diplomatic circle, and Misses Grace and Bertha Potter, daughters of Howard Potter: Miss Roby of New York and Mrs. Walter Winans, who were presented in the general circle. Among those present were: United States Ambassador Thomas F. Bayard, Mrs. Bayard,

The Premier, Lord Rosebery, is evidently in poor health. When he was seen bidding farewell to the Queen of Holland at the railroad station, previous to their departure for home, he tooked ten years older than he did six months ago. His face was haggard and he leaned upon a stick. His breakdown on Wednesday night while making a speech at the reception of the National Liberal Club has revived the worst rumors which have been in circulation concerning his health. Lord Rosebery, who looked pale and fatigued, evidently had a sudden lapse of memory which caused him to lose the thread of his argument and he gased about in a dazed manner while turning to his friends for relief. Under the prömpting of the datter, he succeeded in terminating his discourse, but it was only by a great effort that he did so. It is true that the Premier had previously done a heavy day's work. He was at the Foreign Office in the morning and had attended the drawing-room in the afternoon. Finally he was present at an official dinner in the evening of the same day before going to the seception of the National Liberal Club, but the significant feature of his condition was his utter forgetfulness of what he was agying and intended to say and this cannot be accounted for by his fatigue as usual, as she status of the same as brief as usual, as she status of the same as brief as usual, as she status of the same as brief as usual, as she status of the same as a brief as usual, as she status of the same as brief as usual, as she status of the same as brief as usual, as she status of the same as usual as she statu

London has taken to early hours. The parks are crowded during the early morning and dearted before noon. In Hyde Park elmplicity in dress is noted in the characters of the riders of both sexes who frequent Rotten Row, a contrast to the former startling styles which prevailed. The women are mostly wearing simple white straw sailor hats and plain overcoats over the plainest of riding habits. Strange to say, the pleblan Battersea Park now shares with aristocratic Hyde Park in fashionable favor, and many well-known people are to be seen daily enjoying bicycle rides in that park, which, not so long ago, was looked upon as being a resort only fitted for the class of people compelled by economy to resire on the Surrey side of the Thames. But if Battersea is not a fashionable locality, Battersea park at least is rapidly working its way into popularity.

There were numbers of dinners on Wednesday last, devoted to literature and the press. The Prince of Wales presided at the dinner of the Printers' Orphan Asy-lum, and the Duke of York was chairman of the Royal Literary Fund dinner, while the Conservative leader in the House of Commons, the Rt. "We habitually boast," said Balfour, "of the extension of our railway, postal and telegraph facilities, but we are inclined to overlook the press as the agent which brings into communication the different classes of society. In my judgment alithe machinery used in communicating information to the public is not of really more importance to the community at large than the power of the people to communicate by advertisement and to bring the buyer and seller together, and to give them the machinery for communicating their wishes to one another.

Mr. and Mrs. George Gould, after arriving at Southampton from New York by the American line steamship New York, on Wednesday last, proceeded to Paris on a fortnight's visit to Count and Countess Castellane. The Hon. George W. Curzon, M.P., for the Southport division of Lancashire, reappeared in the House of Commons on. Barrington, on taking Toole's part at the latter's theater, read a telegram which he recived on Thursday from the actor-manager, denying the alarming rumors circulated regarding his health and adding: "I am not affecting indisposition. In sporting circles there is much comment on the fact that all of Richard Croker's two-year-olds, except Montauk, have been scratched, and that not one of Michael F. Dwyer's horses will race again until August. The announcement on Thursday last that Harry Reed and Stonenell were scratched for the Jubilee stakes, caused much surprise. This was the first big race for which the American horses were entered, and it is one in which they would have met some of the English cracks, including Avington, Ravensbury. Throstle, El Diablo and Priest Holme. Richard Croker yesterday, in notifying the Associated Press representative at Newmarket of the scratching of American horses, said: "We consider that the horses were not exactly fit for hard work. Understand me, they are in good condition, but we are obliged to admit they are somewhat weakened by the voyage and are not acclimated. We want them to be fully up to their works, which at present they are not. Our horses will not start in any more races until August I and then we intend to keep up our end thoroughly. We may be disappointed in the result, but we will at least have a good deal of fun."

Referring to the unfavorable comments regarding Banquet's running in the selling plate and then being bought in by his owner for 760 guineas, Croker said: "Why should not Dwyer buy in his own horse if he so desired? His horse was put up at a fair sale and he only wanted it more than any one else. What English stable, I should like to know, would not do the same thing?"

Croker spoke in unmeasured praise of the kindness which he and he

The track was dusty, and from the half to the quarter poles each race was a typhoon in which the hindermotsmost horses were completely enveloped and lost to view.

The event of the day was the Inaugural, a handicap sweepstakes for three-year-olds and upward, the winner pulling down something over $5000. The distance was one mile. Dr. Hasbrouck was the favorite among the young ones, until his name was seratched, together with that of John Cooper and David, Chris Smith's entry, Ya Tambien, and Uranio, quoted at 9 to 5, were much liked. Urania was to have set the pace and Yo Tambien was to have done the winning. Libertine was well liked and sold at 3 to 1, but for some unaccountable reason O'Connell carried the most money at the same figures. O'Connell with J. McDonald up, was left riderless at the half-mile post, the bridle having broken and the jockey fell to the ground. The horse came in second to last with his gearing and caparison dangling between his legs.

Yo Tambien had a poor start and did not get in the bunch until reaching the head of the stretch. Libertine got away well and the process of the process of the stretch.

A TWENTY-YEAR FIGHT.

EX-CONGRESSMAN BLAND ON FREE COINAGE.

Colorado's Substitute Silver Delegates—Democrats Call a Confer-ence at Des Moines--Egan

DENVER, May 11.—The Hon. Richard P. Bland, the Missouri ex-Congressman, opened his Colorado lecture tour in this city tonight. An audience that filled the spacious Broadway Theater greeted the silver champion, who was happily introduced by Senator. Teller, with long-continued and tor Teller. with long-continued apthroughout his address, the delivery of which occupied nearly two hours. It was a notable fact that fully half of those in attendance were women.

"I have chosen for my subject," said "I have chosen for my subject," said Bland, after acknowledging his magnificent reception, "The Fight of Twenty Years in Congress for the Free Coinage of Silver and the Fight Yet to Come. This is the first time I have ever visited a silver-mining State since this twenty-year battle began. I have no interest whatever in the State's producing the precious metals and no interest whatever in the State's producing the precious metals, and no sympathy for them beyond the interest and sympathy I have in our common country. The losses which your silver-producers have sustained on account of the demonetization of silver are not to be compared with the losses of the fermers of Missouri, in the fall of prices of farms and the products of the soil, consequent, as we believe, upon the demonetization of silver."

Bland prefaced his review of the twenty-year battle for silver with an account of the manner in which its demonetization was accomplished and demonetization was accomplished and gold established as the unit of value by the act of 1873.

"While it is evident," he said, "from the manner in which this revolution in our monetary system was accom-plished, that it was done in an indirect and stealthy maner, yet it the most important and far-read legislation on money ever enacted by our government."

The lecturer then reviewed full all the attempts made in Congress to remonetize silver after the effects of the act of 1873 became known. He said that the Free Coinage Bill of 1877, which was vetoed by President Hayes, was voted for by Mr. Carlisle of Kentucky, now Secretary of the Treasury; Mr. Foster of Ohio, who was Secretary of the Teasury under President Harur government." tucky, now Secretary of the Treasury; Mr. Foster of Ohlo, who was Secretary of the Teasury under President Harrison's administration; Mr. Herbert, now Secretary of the Navy; Mr. Mc. Kinley, 'now Governor of Ohlo; Mr. Mills of Texas, now a Senator from that State, and Mr. Morrison of Illinois, now Interstate Commerce Commissioner. "The fact," added Mr. Bland, 'that most of these gentlemen, if not all of them, have changed their views on this question, should be attributed to the uncertainty of human opinion and the action of public men, for surely the necessity of silver restoration is as meritorious and urgent now as it was then."

Regarding the repeal of the Sherman silver-purchase law, Bland said that impartial history would show that this result was secured by methods most reprehensible and deplorable, The moneyed power of this country and Europe had sought to bring the American people and the representatives into complete subjection.

The yeast debts throughout the country lives into complete subjection.

The vast debts throughout the country were pressed for cellection, and when debtors went to the banks to secure loans to meet their obligations, they were coolly told that it was not safe to loan money until the repeal of the purchase clause of the Sherman act. "The friends of gold monometallism insisted that the repeal of the purchase clause of the Sherman act would restore confidence throughout the country, invite an inflow of gold to our shores, and would bring universal prosperity. Just the reverse has occurred. We have sold bonds to the amount of $112,000,000 since the repeal in order to check the flow of gold from our shores, and to maintain the single gold standard. The gold monometallists have given the people an clause of the Sherman act would re have had that sympathy and enthusiasm clouded with the dread of force bills or Federal interference with the'r local self-government. Fortunately, however, in the great battle over the Force Bill in the Senate, the Senators of the West, and especially of the gold and silver-mining States, in their opposition to this measure, which resulted in its final overthrow' and defeat have given assurance to the peoper self-great have given as given by the great have given as given given by the great have given as given by the great have given given by the great have feat, have given assurance to the peo-ple of the South that their political reliance, both for safety of their home government and their prosperity on economic questions, point to the West.

economic questions, point to the West.

"The day has now come when war issues cannot longer dominate our politics. The battle of the standards is the greatest battle to be fought in this country and the world over. This vast country of ours, of forty-four independent States and other vast territory, with over $70,000,000,000 of wealth and with a population of 70,000,000 of people, increasing at the rate of more than a million annually, is strong enough to maintain its own monetary system, to open the mints to the free coinage of gold and silver, and thus again restore, not only to the free coinage of gold and silver, and thus again restore, not only to ourselves, but to the world, the old order of things, by which gold and silver circulated side by side, aiding and supporting each other in giving labor employment and effecting the exchanges of commerce.

"In conclusion, attention should be called to the fact that heretofore no President since 1873 has been a frie of silver. The battle to be fought, and

"Now, figure out the actual value of those five acres," said J. B. Frith, who had given the above statement to a reporter. "Consider that $1.50 a box will be an average price for navels, though next year they are certain to be higher, and that in the natural course of time the crop from the trees now eight years old will be larger."

W. T. Henderson of East Highland realized $1530 from 200 seedling trees, fitteen years old. A claim was made that part of his crop arrived on the market puffed and there was a dispute. The sum stated is the compromise amount, though Mr. Henderson thinks he was justly entitled to $500 more. of silver. The battle to be fought, and the all-important point to gain, is to secure a President who will sign a free-coinage bill if sent to him. and will not use the power and patronage of his office to prevent such a bill coming to him, but, on the contrary, will recommend such legislation. If we can once secure such a President, the battle is won. To this point all our energies in the future must be directed. It is not my purpose, and would be out of place in a non-partisan lecture or speech of this character, to indicate how that may be brought about, further than to express the hope that every true friend of the free coinage of silver will make a firm resolve, and stand to it, that he will not support in any manner a President of the detailed the state how that of silver. WARNER AND SIBLEY.

SACRAMENTO, May 11.—Gen. A. J.

Warner of Ohio and Hon. J. C. Sibley of Pennsylvania spoke to a fair-sized audience tonight on the silver question. Gen.

Warner defined honest money as money which would give the loaner the same power to buy goods when the loan was repaid him as when he made it. Any other kind of money was dishonest money, either to the loaner or the borrower.

PATRICK EGAN'S WARNING NOTE.

NEW YORK, May 11.—Patrick Egan, ex-United States Minister to Chile, takes issue with Chauncey M. Depew, who recently declared that the free-sliver craze was dying out. Egan, who is known as an ardent Republican, sounds a note of warning to the Republicans, who are overconfident of success in 1896.

"I doubt seriously," he said, "that Mr. Depew on his trip came in touch with the actual sentiment of the people. Having been a resident of the West, and knowing the people, I am free to say that I believe silver agitation has only begun, and, unless a reaction sets in, it will become cyclonic before the fail of 1896. Last January I would have readily ventured the prediction that any candidate the Republicans saw fit to nominate in 1896 would be elected. I am now prepared to revise my opinion, insofar as to say that if a candidate opposed to the free colnage of sliver is nominated his election will at least be problematical.

"Republicans should not be over-confident. It would not be a had idea for the party leaders to send some good men to the Western States and let them learn the real sentiment of the people. There may be a new formation of party lines. New conditions may confront us within a year, but the outlook is that the advocates of free silver coinage will demand a hearing at the national convention, or they will make trouble."

CALL FOR AN IOWA CONFERENCE. WASHINGTON, May 11.-The Juso'clock, and there is every reason to believe that a conclusion on the in-come tax was reached. It is presumed tices in the majority has been assigned the work of preparing the opinion of the court. The justices in the minority may each write a separate dissent of not, as each individually prefers.

favor of the constitutionality of the law.

The principal reason for this statement is the fact that after consultation of all the members of the court, a private conference was had between Justices White, Harlan and Brown, all in favor of the law at the previous hearing, and Justice Jackson. Chief Justice Fuller, who favored upholding the CALL FOR AN IOWA CONFERENCE. tice Fuller, who favored upholding the law in part, was not present. The man-ner of Justices Harlan and White, the most strenuous supporters of the law in the previous conferences, also leads to the inference that they felt that they were in the majority. It is re-garded as most certain that a decision will be announced when the court re-assembles on May 20.

CALL FOR AN IOWA CONFERENCE.

DES MOINES (fowa,) May 11.—The call for a State silver conference in this city on June 6 has been issued by about forty well-known Democrats, headed by ex-Lieut. Gov. Bestow. The call says:

"It can no longer be doubted that a concerted effort is being made by a minority but a powerful minority, within both the Republican and Democratic parties, to fost on the country the class doctrine of gold monometallism as distinguished from the genuine bimetallism contemplated by the Constitution and advocated by the Democracy since the birth of the party. This movement is backed primarily-by the money-lenders of Europe, and secondarily by the class interests in this country that have grown up under various legislation. "Their forces, comparatively few in number, but working in perfect harmony for a central purpose, have perfected their plans to control the temporary and perfect organization of the tSate convention, to be held in Marshintown in August. If these plans of the single gold-standard forces are not bravely met and defeated, the party in Iowa will certainly be enrolled under the banner of the foreign financiers and the Wall-street bankers. Let us face the issue like true Democrats and acquit ourselves like men, giving our adversaries no cause for just complaint, but let it be a fight to the finish. This is no time for shinking; no time for silly compromises on vital issues—the welfare for party for years to come is at stake."

Buttons on Men's Coats.

The custom or style of putting buttons on the back of men's coats had its origin at the time when every gentleman wore a sword, when they were used to keep the sword belt in place. When the wearing of swords was no longer fashionable the tallors found another use for the buttons. At the beginning of the present century coats were made with wide skirts, a button-hole was cut in the corner, and when a gentleman went for a walk he turned the skirt and fastened it to the button at the back. A century ago gloves were little worn, and coat sleeves were made long enough to reach the ends of PERSONAL — NOW LET US REASON TOgether. We, the undersigned, have one of the finest salesrooms in Los Angeles; large, well lighted, cool, pleasant; just far enough from the business center to give us cheap rent; not far enough to be inconvealent for you, as all car lines of Main and Spring pass the door: Temple-st. cars half a blocky away. We can show you our goods as they are, as we are not cramped for room. We are not like some of the dealers south of us, who say they would rather run a narrow, dark, crowded store to that people will not be able to see the defects of the goods. We do not have to do business that way; we wish to build up a ouslness can the line, once a customer, always a customer. Fortunate have we been recently ho had nice things to sell; our great stores are full to the door, and still there's more to fellow, so we must sell to make room. Shall we quote some prices?

Bedroom sets, $8; cheval sets, $16; lots of them, too; marble-top sets for $15; fact is, we have some rare bargains in bedroom sets we have sets that cost hundreds of dollars that we must sell for 'steen dollars.

Parlor furniture galore; easy chairs, just too lovely for anything; sofas, divans, etc. Folding beds for $7, worth $12; fine oal and cedar folding beds with 18x40 mirrors for $25, and lots of others.

Lounges, new, for $8; second-hand lounges for $5; very good, indeed. Kitchen tables, $1; combination tables, $3; the latest and best; combination tables, some used, $2.

ranges for $8, $12.

What do you think of those lovely Bohemian vases? We have the finest assortment ever offered in this city; yes, and we are selling them for less than wholesale cost.

Then, in crockery, tinware, agateware, etc., we are getting a pretty full line, and such as we have we purpose to give you such bargains as you will find at no other store in Los Angeles.

We want your trade; we are going to deserve it; we are going to keep offering you untel barcains until we get it, then we shall continue to give you bargains, so that we can keep it. Will you come and see us? For you save about one-fourth by trading with the RED RICE FURNITURE CO., 351-252 N. Main st. 351-352 M. Main st.

THE PROPOSED ELECTRIC MOTOR FOR DRAWING CANAL-BOATS.

NEW YORK, May 3.—"One of the most important and at the same time least-noticed departments of electric science is that which has to do with aquatics." This statement is made by Thomas Commerford Martin, author of "Electrical Boats and Nortestian" of the salt white the salt white the salt which has to do with aquatics." This statement is made by Thomas Commerford Wartin, author of "Electrical Boats and Depth in the salt white: the water to Navigation." Mr. Martin has considered the subject from all its standpoints. Hence he is competent to speak. Thus beginning there are now regular electric passenger boats plying the Grand Canal. John Jacob boats plying the Grand Canal. John Jacob Astor has severel electric boats, notably the cruising launch Progresso and the smaller Cocyra. The Progresso is the iargest electric boat in America. She is forty-six feet long and can develop a speed of twelve miles an hour. It is understood that Mr. Astor contemplates building a still larger electric boat.

go down to the sea in ships that are propelled by electricity, electricity which gets to being from the ocean tisself. The generaling quality of sea water led M. Trouve to suggest that ships might be worked by primary butteries whose elements will be dipped in the saft water; the water to act as an electricity. It would be curious if the ocean water was made to supply the very energy that would propal vessels over its surface. Trouve designed a raft-battery concating of copper and zinc couples, grouped so as to obblin the requisite power. He estimated that from a raft 100 meters long and sixteen meters wide, he would obtain over 5000 horse-power.

ELECTRIC SUBMARINE APPLIANCES.

"Perhaps we have learned more of the real character of the ceam bottom since the introduction of submarine boats, than ever before. The modern diving-bell boat, is only possible with electricity. The introduction of the current has opened up a new field, and both in the line of sciencific investigation and in the art of war we have much to expect. The diving boat Hovgmand, invested by Lieut. Hovgmand of the Royal Danesh Navy, is an instance of what has been suggested. This boat is fish-shaped and is propelled when on the surface by steam power, and by storage-battery current when submarged. Her submergable quality is obtained from a propeller placed in a vertical well-going right

THE TORPEDO AN ELECTRIC BOA!

"I suppose you might call a torpedo ar electric boat. Strictly speaking it is a

MOORING AND MOVING BOATS BY

ELECTRICTY.

What would you say to mooring a boat

What would you say to mooring a boat by electricity? That is one of the things which will be done by means of the current. Have you ever been on a ferry-boat and experienced the agony of walting while the boatman tried to see how long he could be winding the windiass? Every-body has. Now, by taking advantage of the principles of magnetism, we may do away with all this. It has been suggested that a series of powerful electro-magnets be arranged on a ferryslip, so that a boat having large pleces of iron affixed to the bow will be strongly attracted. Or the wharf itself could have the iron coping placed upon it, and the magnets on the boats receive their energy from the dynamos in the regular lighting equipment. It is feasible.

"Speaking of ferry-boats reminds me that these crafts will now be worked by electricity. The single machine on board will be a motor connected to the propeller. The electric current will be generated on ahore and transmitted to the motor on thee boat through a cable dangling along under water after the boat. The cable | just reach across the river and is wo and unwound by means of a spindle, the boat goes backward and forward here are ferries worked by electricity dined from a cable stretched through air under a bridge. The boat might belied a troiley boat, as its action is idecal, electrically, with that of a troileyar. Such a device naturally brings us that more recent but much more impdnt branch of ecetrical aquatics. I refer the electric canal-boat. No other departing has had more discussion.

THE ELBOTRIC CANAL-BOAT.

"The vast influence of the count."

THE ELECTRIC CANAL-BOAT.

"The vast influence of the canal figure of the commercial-view point makes a general introduction of electricity on it important question. There are fro twelve thousand to fifteen thousand miles of canals in Europe. There have bee 4468 miles of canals in the United States More than two thousand miles are etill in use. One canals in the United States More than two thousand miles are etill in use. One canals has a unit carry as much as ten to twenty freight cars, and, even allowing for the difference in time consumed, the cost is very much less by canal than by railroad. These figures are important, innemuch as they represent facts already laid down. The early canalboats were pulled by slaved, Mule power was afterward substituted and has continued until the procent time, when it is proposed to introduce electricity.

"Most people will remember the official tria's of the Frank W. Hawley, on the Bris Canal. The Hawley was a trolley-boat but while the trolley-boat has some excellent fertures, it has some drawbacks. Various methods have been devised. One is the use of a false stern, containing a motor and propeller, which excellent features, it has some drawbacks. Various methods have been devised. One is the use of a fades etern, containing a motor and propeller, which can be placed on any canal-hoat. The current is supplied by a cable along the elde of the canal. This cable has a trolley-wheel truck running on it. A flexible wire connects it to the canal-boat motor. If current is to be obtained in this manner, however, it is generally conceded that a regular system of tux-propellers should be used, each tug carrying along with it a string of boats. Another electric dievies sucks water through the hill of the boat and projects it out at the evern with such force that the boat is propelled forward. In Frunce there is a system which provides for a cable lying in the canal. The boat has electric machinery, which grips the cable tightly, and by means of revolving drucas pulls itself along. A movable cable traveling on large drums or pulleys along the canal boat has been used. The canal boatman attaches a hawser to the cable, and the boat, consequently, is pulled along as the cable moves. It has been suggested also that we pull the boats in series by means of locomotives running ulong the canal boanks.

A CANAL-BOAT MOTOR ON THE BANK "The most ingeunious method of all, per-naps, is that which calls for the erection of a double rail along the canal bank. The rail carries a current of electricity and at the same time serves as a track on which runs a small motor. It is merely necessary to run a line from the boat to the motor. The motor runs along of itself and drags the boat after it. This method, or others analagous to it, may be strongly commended, because there is no propeller to cause the water to wash away the canal banks—the great objection to steam canalboats.

"The introduction of electricity on ca-nals has another advantage—the filumi-nation of the towpath; quite an important element in furthering the operation of the canal. I notice that the Baitte Canal is it be equipped with 25,000 incandescert, lamps. The Manchester Canal is illumi-nated and so will be the proposed ship ca-nal which will extend from Mobile to the Gulf of Mexico. THEODORE WATERS. (Copyright, 1896, by S. S. McClure, Limited.)

Unfavorable Comments in New York on the San Joaquin Valley Railroad.

Bumors Regarding the Local Lines-More Talk of a Road Between Chine and Pomena—To Redondo and Santa Monica.

The report telegraphed from Chicago, published in yesterday's Times, holds out but little hope of the Western railroads reaching any basis for a permanent reorganization of the Transcontinental Passenger Association. At the preliminary meeting, which took place on Friday in that city, it is stated that after some discussion a commission was appointed empowered to draw up a plan of reorganization to be submitted to the general meeting not later than May 23. This gives the commission about two weeks for connubiating purposes, and it will probably take all of that time to make the Burlington people see that it would be to their interest to take a hand in the new deal. For some time past the Burlington managers have not been disposed to take an immense amount of stock in transcontinental passenger associations, and it will take more than tall talking to convince them of the error of their ways.

DENVER, May 11.—The Burlington

DENVER, May 11.—The Burlington Railroad Company has filed notice with Chairman Flint of the local passenger ascontained that it would withdraw from that organization May 15. No reason is given for this action. One inference drawn is that the Burlington takes this step for the purpose of forcing the Union Pacific into an ironclad agreement on Western passesses the purpose of the Union of the Union Pacific into an ironclad agreement on Western passesses the purpose of the Union Pacific into an ironclad agreement on Western passes and the Union Pacific into an ironclad agreement on Western passes and the Union Pacific International P senger business.

Another interpretation of the movement is that it is simply in the interests of economy and that the Burlington will still agree to any reduced excursion rates that the lines, remaining in the association may make.

VALLEY ROAD SLURRED.

VALLEY ROAD SLURRED.

NEW YORK, May 11.—Antagonism to the new San Joaquin Valley Railroad is taking on a new, though not unexpected phase. The Wail-street Journal, a financial paper which has always shown a degree of friendliness to C. P. Huntington and his schemes indicative of inspiration from that source, publishes the following slur upon the valley project:

"Advices from California indicate that there is a practical certainty of very large.

siur upon the valley project:
"Advices from California indicate that there is a practical certainty of very large crops this year in the San Joaquin Valley region. The rainfall has been almost perfect and nothing short of a miracle can prevent the wheat crop being abundant.
The new San Joaquin Valley road project appears to be hanging fire. A gentleman who has just returned from an extended trip over the Southern Pacific says the whole business has an opera bouffe aspect.
Subscriptions are being solicited from the people in small amounts of 31 at a time, with the Ladies' Club actively canvassing for them. One good effect of the new road has been the fact that legislation in California hostile to railroads has been shut off altogether, as it is impossible to pass other than general laws, and the Southern Pacific cannot be hit without the new road also being attacked."

RIVERSIDE, May 11.—(Special Correspondence.) The Chino Champion prints the following: "This year's output of sugar from the Chino factory will be shipped from here over the new link of the Southern Pacific kite-shaped track. Inside of sixty days we will hear the whistle of locomotives between Chino and Pomona, to be followed by regular train service between Riverside and Los Angeles via Chino. This fact is now so well established that it will do to bank upon. "Yesterday morning H. E. Huntington, assistant to the president of the Southern Pacific Company, and William Hood, chief engineer of the company, accompanied by W. H. Holabird and two friends of Mr. Huntington's from San Francisco, drove into Chino from Pomona, where Mr. Huntington's private car is awaiting the party. They visited the sugar factory briefly, then drove out along the old grade on the right-of-way which the company has acquired, and on which the road will be built. "Grant Bros." outfit is at work on the line from Shorbs to Passdena, and it is reasonably believed that on the completion of that line they will bring their forces directly to Chino, as the early commencement of the sugar campaign, with its heavy freight business, will make it desirable to have this link completed first. "Superintendent Muir of Los Angeles is quoted as saying that the new route will in time be made the main or principal route to and from Los Angeles for overland travel, from some station near Banning. The new route will avoid several heavy grades that the present route bas, and it will be the most picturesque and attractive for travelers of any in Southern California. The business to come before the meeting is the fixing of rates for a number of the more important conventions of the year. It is probable that the rates granted for the meeting of the National Educational Society in Denver in July will be reconsidered.

H. E. Huntington, assistant to the president of the Southern Pacific Company, who arrived in this city in his private car Bueneventura, accompanied by a party of friends, among whom is Chief Engineer Hood of the Southern Pacific, left for Port Los Angeles yesterday afternoon, where he will make a short stay.

The last train which arrived at the Arcade Depot from Santa Monica yesterday over the Southern Pacific was a good lifustration of the number of passengers to and from that city by the sea. It was composed of ten coaches crowded to their tumost capacity, and was drawn by two engines.

PROPOSED NEW DEAL

Station at 9:15 a.m., and Aroade Depot at 9:25 a.m., for Santa Monica. That train, on the return, will leave Santa Monica at 5 o'clock in the evening for Los Angeles. The trains on which the biggest patromage in expected are those leaving the Aroade Depot at 9:25, 9:25, 10:30 a.m., and 1:10 p.m. and which, returning, leave Santa Monica at 3:30, 5 and 5:50 p.m.

Bd Geers, the well-known racing man who brought his string of celebrated horses here from the East last winter, and who has been wintering them at Agricultural Park, stopped them all back East yesterday evening. The horses occupied two cars, were accompanied by attendants, and went over the Santa Fe route.

latest information respecting this part of the State and changes in running of trains.

Another excursion over the Santa Fe
Enes to the Gund Canyon of the Colorado River is announced for June 3. This excursion will be under the special direction of Miss Haitle Ellicit of Pomona, who will act us chaperone. The rate for the round trip is $50, including scage ride, and tickets are good returning until July 3.

A special beach train on the Santa Fe for Santa Monica and Redondo Beach will leave LaGrande Station this morning at 9 o'clock, and Central avenue at 9:14.
Returning it will leave-both Redondo and Santa Monica at 5:30 p.m.

Reports frum Redondo Beach are that the number of passengers who have visked that place during the past week has been greezer than ever before. The additional train put on by the Santa Fe, scheduled to leave Los Angeles at 5:15 p.m., will, it is expected, be the means of encouraging many visiturs to Redondo, who, on account of their buttness affairs,
have been unable to go down.

Engineers have been at work at Redondo Beach during the past few days deturmining approaches to the new wharf, on which work is to be commenced and pushed to completion with all possifica

RABBI VOORSANGER.

Religious Superstition and Superstitious Religion."

The Last of a Series of Interesting Lectures Given Last Evening.

The Common Superstitions Surround ing Humanity—The Part Played by Poetry—Substituting the Letter for the Spirit.

The last lecture of the series by Rabbi The last lecture of the selected in Unity Church last evening before a fairly well-alled house. Judge R. M. Widney and R. . Haines occupied the platform with Dr. and the lecturer was intro-

Voorsanger began his lecture with a sketch of the common superstitions which humanity is imbued, with almost no exceptions from the universal malady. If tested by the potent light of reason, everyone knows that none of these things are other than excrescences of re other than excrescences of unworthy of our better senti ments. Yet their continued existence leads to but one conclusion, that super-stition is grounded in human nature itself; that the mind of man, rarely so well balanced that it can safely proceed from cause to effect, is habitually swayed by ons based upon unrealities. In considerable danger to the rational progress of society, as ever superstition is a cloud upon the sun n, hiding the light and obscuring the cal evolution of man.' e poetry of antiquity is responsible many of our superstitions, as the cuts peopled the universe with be-which were but the creatures of own poetic imaginations. No one an was lost in the acceptance of them seems realities. There is an inherent tenency in human nature to crystallize impination into a fact, but this hereditary aperstition can be repressed and finally liminated from our being. "Turning ow to religious superstition," said Dr. oorsanger, "we must be careful lest we cead upon dangerous ground. In general, religious superstition partakes of the ame characteristics as any other superstition." The lecturer deduced from this efficient was an earliest religious imaginings of bankind were the flower-beds from which bat the earliest religious truths of the torid; and the second, that religious fractice is, up to the present day, largely nfuenced by such superstitions. Regarding the first fact, the speaker acknowlaged it to be a bold assumption and one hat had heretofore been severely criticated. had heretofore been severely criti-nas it involves the proposition that ion is based upon natural instead of rnatural facts, and, furthermore, that religion of Israel, the monotheism of forefathers, is the grand culminating it of centuries of growth and develop-t.

It also involves the proposition that in order to estimate the full strength of religion we must trace it from the beginning under conditions that in no wise partake of the supernatural. The rabbi frankly confessed the difficulty in doing this without abating our loyalty to God, as religion has hitherto found its basis in supernatural revelation. "Why must strength of religion be tested by supernaturalism?" saked the rabbi. "Cannot religion be admitted to be of God, even though its growth has been natural?" Among the sacred traditions of the holy scriptures, we may discover many of the "flower-beds" from which the truth rose in strength and majesty; the beautiful tradition of the creation of the world and the origin of the human race, which reprea of the creation of the world and the gin of the human race, which repre-ts the effort of human consciousness account for the beginning of things; traditions and grand old epics of the ilical heroes and the poetic explanations natural facts. Are these sterling facts, are they the poetical imaginings of our tes and singers? One of the strong weapons of atheism

of the strong weapons of atheism at revealed religion is, that it deis an investigation into facts that upon no natural basis. "Meet the st on his own ground," said the ter earnestly, "Give him proof for argument for argument. Wrestle him upon the strong basis of eviative religional strong has of eviwith him upon the strong basis of evidence as it exists all around him, and be not betrayed, into quoting from tradition to substantiate facts. Tradition is not history, nor is it intended to be. The acceptance of miraculous descriptions as the truths of history is, in my humble belief, the acme of religious superstition." The researches of Schliemann established as a fact the existence of Troy when all the world believed it to be a myth, yet will anyone content that all the flowers of the Homeric classics are realities. Nor is it specessary in admiring the traditions and society of our forefathers, to fall into the specessary in admiring the traditions and society of our forefathers, to fall into the specessary in admiring the traditions and society of our forefathers, to fall into the specessary in admiring the traditions and society of our forefathers, to fall into the specessary in admiring the traditions and specific to the specessary of the specyle. It is most natural that a reverent and plous people should depct, in refined and classical figures of speech, the first efforts to infuse a moral consciousness into barbarous man. In reading the magnificent conceptions of Hebrew poetry the soul is exalted with the ferror and richness of the fancy, but to assume that these things are cold history would indeed cause us to tread upon the bordering of superstition. Dr. Voorsanger went and to say that what applies to the sacred iterature of Israel applies in equal degree to every group of miracles upon shich a system of belief has been founded, but asserted that as far as the Jewish religion was concerned, not one of sits doctrines required verification by miracle or apple in the content of the second of the seco areal required verification by miracle orarvel. In touching upon the ancient traditions, arabbi declared that he had but hinted le concerning angels and demons are it results of the tendency of man to yatify the powers around him; and how with of superstition is there, and how uch of fact, in the various representains of the hereafter.

The speaker emphatically declared his conation that God does not intend life to be t off with the suspension of our nervous ree, and His firm belief in the immortalof the soul, and the eternity of spiritlife, yet all attempts to foundize the ode of the spirit are but human attempts picture an ineffable and incomprehensicondition determined alone by the will God the Father.
Imporstitions are constantly established this tendence in constantly established constron determined alone by the will God the Father, morestations are constantly established this tendency to create facts out of try, and every action of man is modified by his uncamp beliefs. Dr. Voorger then proceeded to "roust" the studistic fakers who ply their nefarious do upon the fears and superstitions mankind, and deported the monstrous constructure of superstition and deceparable thas risen upon the farm cold trines of the continuity of spirit-life the immortality of the soul. It is also important that we understand emact nature of our religious profession and practices. When an embiem of worship or religious pfactics is no longer understood, or serves no purpose of the rational mind, its continuance is an expression of gross superstition. When a religious practice is no longer the expression of an intelligent worship of God, when it is continued because of its harry antiquity, its continued because of its harry antiquity, its continued because of its harry antiquity, its continuence is a religious superstition.

"It is but dutiful toward the majesty of the Creator," said the rabbi, "to eliminate from our worship of Him every practice that is not founded on reason or in our properly-educated sentiment, that we should turive to overcome the tendency to mystify everything around us, thus generating fears that are unworthy of us, and thus becoming rational worshipers of God, rational in belief, profession, conduct, and practice, we will never be subject to the charge of harboring religious superstitions of professing superstitious religion."

Superstitious religion, according to most people, is universally prevalent. The atheist deems all religions superstitious, and sectarians have an uncanny fashion of denouncing all religions not their own as peculiarly superstitious. This indicates a selfishers—begositen of narrow thought and imited education. Intelligent people should educate themselves to the conviction that truth assumes many guises, is taught by different processes and promulgated by many methods. The quality of superstition lies not in a misinterpresistion of the character of Diety, but rather in the abuse of religion as regards the method of worshipping God.

All men believe in God, but the integrity of every religious system depends upon whe worship Him. Worship is not a revealed thing, but purely the suggestion of reason and human emotion. The character of religions, which, in turn, depends upon the conditions of our time and generation. Dr. Voorsanger then repeated the grand Hebrew litany, which repeated the grand Hebrew litany, which repeated the grand Hebrew litany, which repeated th guides of human life.

Pagans are superstitious, their worship is irrational, and, instead of regarding human virtue as a revelation of the divine, they give to God the attributes which

Thus were created the many forms and guises which represent the wisdom and poetry of primitive days. They were the expression of the civilization of the early races of man. The pagan conception of the deities, as fallible and finite creatures like themselves, to be angered or propitiated, was purely irrational, and when the idea became crystallized into a fact, it degenerated into a most deplorable superstition, corroding the noblest emotions of humanity. The growth of religious truth, stupendous as it has been, has yet been somewhat one-sided. Our worship and practice is not allways in consonance with our pendous as it has been, has yet been some-what one-sided. Our worship and prac-tice is not always in consonance with our, lofty conceptions of God. If our belief in God is perfect, we should avoid prac-ticing anything that will detract from the majestic conception. Our worship should be the garment of our consciousness, its expression in consonance with the teach-ings we have received.

Prayer and adoration are natural to nan; they are the language of his emoman; they are the language of his emo-tions and his consciouaness. What is their object? Remember that God created and sustains the universe. His creatures can-not hope to change His will by pleadings or to do him a favor by acts of adora-tion. All worship must be simply the language of conschusness, not the demand of God, but the expression of the overflow-ing love and gratitude of man. Prayer is not for the purpose of propitiation, but the strepressible overflow of the heart and spirit.

The heathens were the abject slaves of their deities, and all prosperity or misfortune was supposed to come at the will of the propitiated or displeased god, but the man who claims any merit in pleasing deity is guilty of irrational superstitute.

ing deity is guilty of irrational superstition.

The old Jewish prayer for the dead:
"Blessed be God who is good and who doeth only beneficence," is good to remember in grief or misfortune when the rebellious human soul rises in anger against the will of God.

The speaker, in referring to the hold which the idea of sacrifice or propitiation has over the minds of men, brought up the view that God demands no sacrifice, whether of offerings, tears, or good deeds,

the view that God demands no sacrifice, whether of offerings, tears, or good deeds, except as they represent our purity of spirit and sincerity in devotion.

The rabbi closed his lecture with an earnest protest against the substitution of the letter for the spirit, the symbol for the inner meaning; the ancient rites for the broad and rational worship of God, seen so much in the stricter sects of both Christians and Jews, and a strong plea for the light of intelligence and reason in the worship and religious feeling of all men.

DECLARED A DRAW.

A Bloody Battle in the Kitchen of the City Jail.

The kitchen of the City Jail was the scene of a bloody slugging match Friday night. While Jailer Fowler was attending to some duty in the Receiving Hospital he heard a commotion in the kitchen, but thought some of the trusties were merely catching rats. As the noise continued for some time, he hastened to investigate and found two trustles—Tom Way and a man named Church, who is known as Lulu Dorman's "mac," both doing time for petty iarceny—punching each other in frue prize-ring style, while the rest of the trusties looked on and enjoyed the sport. The failer stopped the mill, and declared it a draw, honors being about even. The floor was covered with blood, and it would have taken very little more to have knocked either of the combatants out. Both have black eyes and broken noses and will do penance in the chain gang.

GOODMAN'S PRISONERS Two Burglars Brought Back from

Detective Goodman returned from Sacramento yesterday with two prisoners, John Corcoran and William Picket, charged with the burglary of J. C. Schlessinger's residence, on South Hill street, the night of April 4. The men were arrested at Sacramento while disposing of some of the stolen goods, and handed over to the officer from Los Angeles.

The robbery was committed while the family were away from home, entrance being gained by raising a window. Their plunder, which consisted mostly of jew-eiry, netted them $465. Some of the gold had been broken up and sold to the San Francisco mint.

Corcoran is a chiaracter who has given the officers much trouble. When arrested he was masquerading as John Harrison. While in Los Angeles he called himself Joe Henderson, but his true name is believed to be Joe Coughlan, at least that is the name under his portrait in the rogues' gallery, and he is described as an ex-convict. He denies this, however, claiming he was never convicted of a felony, but admits having done time for petty offenses.

About two months ago Coughlan, or Henderson, as he then called himself.

About two months ago Coughlan, or Henderson, as he then called himself, was arrested in Chinatown by Officer Ritch, for frequenting an opium joint, but was acquitted at his trial. During the flesta he committed an assault on Officer Conley and was fined $25 for battery and warned out of town. That was nearly two weeks after the Schlessinger burglary, and he and his pal, Picket, who also has one or more allases, then went north.

(Pasadena Star:) The Pasadena Fruit Association is now shipping oranges from this district quite freely, and the whole crop will doubtless be sent forward soon. Of course, the prices still rule low, a condition that was foreseen when the failure of the Florida crop brought over from southern Europe whole fleets of orange and lemon-laden vessels. It is possible that this source of supply may be shut off in part by the prevailing low prices. In any event, the season's experience has been a dear object lesson in political economy to the people of California. If an administration and a Congress had been in power that would have shown statesmanship enough to protect the home growers

COL. M. R. PLAISTED,

Editor and Publisher of the "Riverside Daily Enterprise." Speaks in Favor of Dr. Shores' Treatment.

COL M. R. PLAISTED, THE ENTERPRISING EDITOR OF THE "RIVERSIDE ENTERPRISE."

Among newspaper men of Southern California none is better ad more favorably known than Mark R. Plaisted, publisher of the Riverside Daily Enterprise. Five years ago Mr. Plaisted started this now enterprising and infuential daily on a cash capital of $65. By hard work and untiring efforts Mr. Plaisted has placed his paper among the first in Southern California. At the present time the Enterprise has a daily circulation of over 1660. It is Democratic in politics; it is bright and newsy and is one of the best advertising mediums in Southern California outside of Los Angeles. Its columns are daily filled with announcements of the leading Los Angeles merchants, who recogize Mr. Plaisted's paper as modern, successful, and enterprising. "Mark," as he is known among the newspaper fraternity is a jovial, goodnatured fellow, liked by all who know him and as an expounder of the Democratic doctrines, bis paper is indorsed by the administration.

Mr. Plaisted, when interviewed, said:

"For the past five years I have worked from 15 to 18 hours a day attending to the interests of my paper. From worked from 15 to 18 hours a day attending to the interests of my paper.

Aft. Finisted, which later truck, said.

"For the past five years I have worked from 15 to 18 hours a day attending to the interests of my paper. From such long hours I would become thoroughly exhausted and worn out, tired and nervous, feeling that my system needed medical help. I applied to Dr. A. J. Shores of Los Angeles, having known, personally, of his ability to cure symptoms like mine. After two weeks under his care I can truth'ully say that HE HAS CURED ME and I feel refreshed and invigorated, ready to do my duty as editor without the least ex ertion."
Such statements, coming as they do, from the most prominent persons in the State, proves that Dr. Shores has the confidence of the people. It proves that Dr. A. J. Hill-street Grade Change. WHAT THE COMMISSIONERS HAVE AGREED ON.

nissioners, consisting of the The commissioners, consisting of the Mayor, the Street Superintendent and the City Engineer, for the regrading of Hill street (formerly Castelar street) between Rock street and Bellevue avenue have agreed upon their report. There remains a considerable amount of writing in order to prepare the report for filing and so it will probably be three or four days before it can be made ready.

After the report is filed with the City Clerk property-owners will have thirty days in which to protest against its confirmation and the City Council can thereafter act on such protests.

days in which to protest against its colifirmation and the City Council can thereafter act on such protests.

The only person to whom damages are allowed is Mrs. Banning, whose property is adjudged to be damaged to the arrount of $2025.20 by the change. She is assessed a small sum for benefits, so that the net damages allowed her are $2000. Her claim for damages as presented to the commissioners, it is stated, was for $20,000.

The property in the district is assessed for benefits from 8 to 20 cents per front foot, according to location. The district includes property or both sides of Broadway as far south as Franklin street and Court street. On the north bide of Beli-yvue avenue it extends cast as far as Teed

Alpine street and west as far as Beaudry are also assessed.

The Supply Committee. RECOMMEND A CEMENT TESTER BE AGAIN EMPLOYED.

At the meeting of the Supply Committee of the City Council resterday morning the matter of the communication from the City Engineer, recommending that he be permitted to again employ a man for the purpose of testing cement was considered. Committeemen Snyder and K'ngery were present, but Councilman Savage, who is the third member of the committee and who has been conspicuous by his absence at most meetings of the committees of the City Council, was not present. City Engineer Compton presented his side of the case and the matter was taken under advisement after an explanation in reference to the importance of having such a man employed. It was stated that the committee would have a report on the matter ready for presentation to the Council tomorrow.

Later in the day the committee decided to recommend that the requisition for services of the man testing cement for the month of May be allowed.

It was agreed to elso recommend that the requisition of the manager of the free-fabor bureau for one-half the bill for use of telephone be allowed.

Recommend it be Granted.

The Board of Public Works has agreed to recommend the adoption of an ordinance granting a franchise for an oil pipe line to the Pacific Oil Refining and Supply Company as heretofore adverpipe line to the Pacific Oil Refining and Supply Company, as heretofore advertised for sale. The route for the proposed pipe line is as follows: Commencing at Court street and Lakeshore avenue, thence along Lakeshore avenue to First street, thence along First street to Second street, to Pearl street, to Third street, to Flower street, to Seventh street, to Flower street, to Seventh street, to Court street, to Beaudry avenue, to an intersection of the above-named line on Second street; also, from Seventh street wishong Tulip street to the north line of Willow street.

The Refunding Bonds.

There were few new developments yesterday in reference to the situation as to the refunding bonds, which were on Friday announced to probably be invalid. The new law complicates matters to such an extent that it will undoubtedly require a good deal of time to arrive at an intelligent opinion as to what the condition of things really is. It is possible it may be thought best to carry the new law to the Supreme Court, in hope that it may be declared unconstitutional.

The law in question, it will be understood, affects the refunding bonds only and not the school, headworks and city-jail bonds, which have been voted.

Would Pay City Taxes.
Uspaid city taxes will become delinquent tomorrow. It is possible that some arrangement will be made whereby property sold for taxes will be sold to the city. It is stated, however, that property-owners who have not yet paid their taxes will do well to attend to the matter tomorrow, as it is unlikely they may otherwise become the victims of "tax sharks."

Assistant Plumbing Inspector.

Building Superintendent Strange has appointed, as additional assistant, as authorized by the ordinance recently adopted, B. D. Chapman. It is stated to be the intention to have Mr. Chapman act as assistant plumbing inspector, thus relieving the Building Superintendent from having to attend to plumbing work, as he has of late had to do by reason of there being so much of it.

Fourth Street Assessment.

The assessment warrant for the grading, traveling, guttering, curbing, crosswalking, idewalking and sewering of Fourth street between Omar street and Wolfskill avenue, under the bond act, has been issued by the Street Superintendent to the contractor. Property-owners have until June 8 to pay their assessments. After that time assessments amounting to less than $50 will become delinquent, and extra charges will be nquent, and extra charges will be thereon. For assessments in exc that amount bonds will be issued.

The Mayor has received a communication asking that this city be represented at the Pan-American Congress, to be held at Toronto, Camada, July 18 to 25.

The Finance Commutate of the City Council has decided to recommend in the matter of the petition of the committee having in charge the arrangements for the celebration of the Fourth of July for an appropriation, that $1000 be appropriated for the purpose asked.

Clerk E. W. Kinsey of the Folice Court reports for the month of April after April 6 the collection of $272 in fines in his department.

The Police Commission will probably have before it at its next meeting a report on the five saloon proprietors who neglected to pay their city ficense until after the 10th of this manch. It is stated, however, that one or two of them have since paid their licenses.

F. W. Wood and others, as executors of the estate of P. Beaudry, have addressed a communication to the City Council, offering to sell to the city for a site for a city jail and police subon the lot fronting on Buena Vista street, and extending southwesterly to New High street. This lot is 84.4 feet in width and is 190 feet in depth. The price at which the lot is offered to $22,500.

A report has been in circulation to the effect that the city schools would be kept open for two weeks longer than was some time ago decided. It is said, however, that they will close on June 7, but that a special arrangement has been made whereby pupils attending the Normel Scholl may confinue to attend for two weeks after that date on payment of a small sum each.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

A DECISION RELATING TO MUTUAL RELIEF POLICIES

Judge Walter Van Dyke rendered his decision yésterday in the case of Rosa Haas et al., vs the Mutual Relief Association of Petaluma, an action to recover $2000 upon an insurance policy, findings and judgment being ordered for the plaintiff therein, as on May 10, 1879, the mother of the plain-tiff, who was then Lena Brenner, was duly elected a member of the defendant astiff, who was then Lena Brenner, was duly elected a member of the defendant association, and a certificate of membership was issued to her. The by-laws of the association provided that upon the dgath of a member the nominee of such member should receive $1 for every member in good standing in the association at that time. If the deceased had been a member for ten consecutive years, the nominee was to receive the sum of $2000 within forty days after proof of death.

In 1889 Mrs. Hahs nominated her daughter, Rosa, and on June 5, 1894, she died in this city. Proof was made as required by the rules of the association, and a demand made for the $2000.

The defendant corporation, however, endeavored to evade payment upon the ground that one of the clauses of its bylaws provided that "the balance of the $2000 was to be paid in succession (in order of deaths.) out of the accumulations of the reserve fund, when the surplus in excess of $50,000 was sufficient to meet such further payments." It was claimed that there were only 800 members in the association, and that there had not been a surplus over $35,000 for years.

The court, after reviewing the printed statements and reports of the association for some years past, holds that it appears from them and the testimony that the defendant had a sum over $50,000 in its reserve fund, but that it paid dividends to members so as to reduce its fund to a point enabling it to escape the payment of the $2000, which it clearly had no right to do. Mrs. Haas having been a member for over fifteen years, and it being admitted that she had fully compiled with all the requirements of the association and paid all dues and assessments, the court finds that her nominee is entitled to the amount claimed.

THE DAVIS DIVORCE CASE.

THE DAVIS DIVORCE CASE. The trial of the Davis divorce suit was The trial of the Davis divorce suit was concluded in Department Five yesterday, so far us the taking of testimony is concerned, and the matter went over until Tuesday next for argument. At the close of the plaintiff's case, the defendant's counsel moved the court for judgment of non-suit, which was denied. The remainder of the day's session was consumed with the examination of the defendant and five other witnesses in his behalf. From the evidence introduced upon both cides it is apparent that during their forty odd years of married life, Mr. and Mrs. Davis have allowed that mutual contempt, which is bred by familiarity, to step in between them until the breach has gradually grown too wide to be bridged. The worst feature of their dissension is that it has spread to their children, three of whom are arrayed upon their mother's ede, while the eldest takes his father's quarrel up.

SENT TO HIGHLANDS.

SENT TO HIGHLIANDS.

In accordance with the recommendation of Drs. Mathis and Smith, the examining commissioners, the Mrs. Minnie Thompson of Santa Monica was duly adjudged insane and committed to the State asylum at Highlands by Judge McKinley yesterday. Mrs. Thompson, who is about 30 years of age, came here from Arizona, where she was matron of an Indian school for some time, about two years ago. Overwork and disease of the internal organs co-casioned insanity, but it was hoped that rest and charge of scene and climate would prove beneficial. Unfortunately, however, Mrs. Thompson recently conceived the idea that she was a source of trouble to her friends, and since that time has made several attempts at self-destruction, in order to relieve them of further responsibility.

Unfortunately, however, Mrs. Thompson recently conceived the idea that she was a source of trouble to her friends, and since that time has made several attempts at self-destruction, in order to relieve them of further responsibility.

Miss Anna Williams, a native of Tennessee, 19 years of age, residing with her brother at No. 2014 Michigan avenue, was also examined by the same commissioners and committed to Highlands asylum by Judge McKinley. Some time ago Miss Williams had a severe attack of la grippe, which left her in a debilitated condition. Just as she was recovering from the effects of this dread disease, about ten days ago, she suddenly became violently insane, and, as she has both homicidel and suicidel tendences, it is necessary to restrain her.

AH TAI HAS & GRIEVANCE:

A writ of habeas corpus, returnable on Monday morning next, was issued by Judge Shaw yesterday afternoon, at the request of J. F. Ah Tai was convicted in 1892 by Police Justice Gwens, for conducting a Customer of the case was appealed to the Superior Court, and the judgment affirmed in 1893, but

Court Notes.

The case appealed by Jennie Sage and James Conway from the Police Court, where they were charged with petty larceny, was set for hearing by Judge Smith yesterday for Saturday next, May 18.

Judge Smith yesterday morning rendered his decision in the case appealed by John Leechner, the Redondo saloon-keeper, who was convicted of having sold ilquor to minors, the judgment of the lower court being reversed and a new trial ordered.

So far as the taking of testimony is concerned the trial of the case against Leekin, the second of Hem Lock's assailants, was concluded in Department One yesterday. The matter was partially argued by counsel, and will be taken up again tomorrow. Upon motion of the District Attorney an information was filed in Department One yesterday, charging James and Robert Fennel; "the boy burglars," with breaking into Hill & Son's store at Pasadena, on Sunday last, and the court set the arraignment of the juvenile defendants for Monday next, when they will, in all probability, be turned over to the tender mercles of their father.

It is a practice, unfortunately too frequent, for dealers to mark fictitious and fanciful prices upon goods as a basis for reductions and a text for advertising. This is something done on a large scale. Positive evidence confronts as in which the net result of vaunted and much advertised bargains is simply a scale of prices the same as ourselves and other dealers charge regular. stumbling over loosened bricks at every step. Insensibly the melancholy majesity of the lonely park and the silent chateau wrapped in its winding sheet of snow took possession of me, and absorbed in the past I became lost to all senses of time, when the little girl who had served me as guide, anxious no doubt to pocket her fee as soon as possible, interrupted my reverie by the following remarks, uttered in a dreary voice:

"Maimaison was occupied in 1870 by a regiment of pontonniers, you may still see their lists, which are posted on the doors of the guest chambers. These soldiers did a great deal of mischief, here. The Prussians who succeeded them were on the contrary very comme il fant; they

on the occasion of her marriage."

Even our conquerors then, obeying a chivalrous sentiment, felt bound to respect a spot honored by the presence of "le plus grand des hommes." (to use the expression of Thiera,) of the Emperor who had been their most terrible adversary.

It would have been a noble thought on the part of the Bonapartists to buy back Malmaison, the spot where the destiny was woven and unwoven. But, as has been said, "great thoughts come from the heart."

was bought by M. Haguerman, a Swedish banker, who restored it to its original aspect at the time. Josephine purchased it from Mme. Le Coulteux. In 1842 the property was bought for the Queen of Spain; Maria Christina, for f.500,000, and Napoleon III then became owner at the rather excessive cost of f.1,600,000. Some praiseworthy attempts were made to restore to Malmaison its consular appear-weeks, perhaps, and Malmaison, with its vast garden full of memories, will be sold at public auction like any ordinary bid of waste land or vulgar rent-paying property. And the brutal and unimaginative speculator, pickax in hand, will doubtless demolish chose walls, witnesses of so much grandeur, those centenarian trees, those justely alleys and groves of Liac, under whose spadow Prud'hon painted Josephine in all the charm of her nonchalant crecke beauty, and J. B. Isabby painted Bonaratte wandering roofstary and pensive in the long alleys of the park. "There," Isabey weeks, perhaps, and Malmaison, with its parte wandering rolliary and pensive in the long alleys of the park. The portraft finished, I submitted it to the general. He was pleased with the good likeness, and congratulated me especially being able thus to work without any si:

Before the fulfillment of the threatened profanstion, against which the national sentiment ought vigorously to protest, I wished to visit once more the illustrious abode. The journey may be made in less than an hour by the steam tramway running between the Barriere de Tstoffe and St. Germain-en-Laye. It is a napid and suggestive pilgrimage. HALLS DESERTED, LAND FOR SALE.

Here, before the facade, where in olden days the gilden portals used to open wide to a stream of glittering escorts, extends today a melancholy nailing, devoured by today a melancholy railing, devoured by rust.

Everywhere are glaring posters with the inscription: "Land and second-hand building material for safe."

Slowly and in great flakes the snow fells from a heavy-laden sky; the grant trees bend their heads before the key bust. A profound silence reigns in this deserted spot. The first impression is one of intense sadness, and involuntarily my heart sinks within me before this mournful evidence of the mortality of all things.

A sullen-faced little girl conducted me through the deserted and dilapidated rooms of the chateau, calling my attention in a harsh voice, and with the monocrous intonation of a professional guide, to the grand vestibule, the library, the billiard-room (still adorned with its principal furniture,) Josephine's hedroom, the pretty circular room, in which the poor, forsaken Empress died, the Emperor's apartment, the rooms of Queen Hortence and Eugene de Beautharnais, the council chamber.

And ail around us fragments of faded hangings clung to the leprous walks, where even yet may be dimity traced some decorative painting of that period.

the half-open doors wandered moaningly down the great deserted corridors upon which open the long series of guest chambers, occupied once, in the happy years 1798 and 1799 by Bernardin de St. Pierre (author of "Paul and Visginia.) Arnault, Ducis, Lemereler, Joseph Chemer, the poet; Mehul, the musician: Thaima, the actor: Volney, Andrieux, Duval, the painters Gerard, Golodet, Isabey. Drawn by the bewitching charm of Josephine, they assembled here in a cort of miniature court, where wit and freedom reigned unchecked as yet by the chilling byzintinisme of citquette. This grave reunion of philosophers, literateurs and artists was always brightened by the presence of young women in all the ephendor of their beauty. First, the sisters of the future Caesar, and Hortense de Beauharnais (then about 18 years old.) the Counteas of Houdetot, Mmes. Cafarelli, Audreas y and Tallien, the radically beautiful Regnaut de St. Jean d'Augely, so attractive in her somewhat frail layelines, whose de St. Jean d' Augely, so attract-ive in her somewhat frail loveliness, whose

Alas! those lovely forms, slender and graceful in their long Greek tunics, that used to haunt the park at Malmaison, are now, like the pretty, frivolous, ribbon-bedecked ladies of the Trianon—"changees en poussiere legere." A few more years and the recollection of those vanished beauties of other days, whom we might almost have known, will be confounded in our thoughts with those long past ages!

Around me the wind sighs and the snow

Around me the wind sighs and the snow dash's through the broken windows against my face. The loosened tapestries rise and fail mourfully under decaying ceilings. An odor of death, of a far-distant past envelops and oppresses me. Emperor, Empress, kings, queens, princesses, beautiful women, famous authors, applauded arrists, who lived but yesterday in this mansion, where now only my footsteeps breaks the silence, nothing remains of you, nothing but the empty echo of your glory. Ah! how quickly are the dead forgotten! And still the great trees of the park remain eternally young and wave their large branches in majestic indifference above this little corner of the world, so famous for its memories, memories that are happy and me the wind sighs and the snow branches in majested the world, so famous this little corner of the world, so famous for its memories, memories that are happy and tragic by turns.

AND PRIORIES AT MALMAISON—

THE DIVERSIONS AT MALMAISON-THE THEATER.

For if Malmaison was in contemporary phrase, "le sejuor des jeux et des ris" when Bonaparte back from Marengo, amused himself by giving the cue to Fleury when Bonaparte back from Marengo, amused himself by giving the cue to Fleury or Mile. Mars listened to Arnault reciting his fables, played at leap-frog with the merry Isabey, or sought momentary forgetfulness of the cares of state by joining in the "Monaco," his favorite dance—it became, after Waterloo, the scene of a most tragid drama.

It was only after the return from Marengo that a theater was built at Malmaison. The style was extremely simple and the whole cost of construction did not exceed f.30,000. The outlay on improvements of Malmaison by the architects, Percier and Lacountaine, in May, 1801, amounted for more than f.600,000, and this excessive figure determined the First Consul to, cut viown expenses. However, in spite of the theater's lack of architectural pretensions, lit was built of wood and roafed with slate, the performances of the Malmaison company were witnessed by a most distinguished public, as we may judge from the following lines: "The first loges were occupied only by dukes, duchesses, ambastadors and their wives, the wives of ministers and of the principal generals of the republic; in the second were placed the counsellors of state with their wives, the senators, tribunes and judges; then, in the pit, generals and officers of all ranks." The managers were, as a rule, Mile. Hortene and her brothar, Eugene de Beauharnais; the chief actors, Talma, Michot, Fleury and Mile. Mars. Bonaparte himself was especially fond of tragic roles, thinking they suited better his deep voice and thinking they suited better his deep voice and the RARE ART TREASHRES.

THE COSTLY EMBELLISHMENTS, THE RARE ART TREASURES.

Was it not here that Josephine fled after ance. There was even some talk of assigning to it the role most suitable, that of Musee de Souvenirs du Grand Empereur. Several criginal drawings of Isabey were secured for it, in the old room of the First Consul was placed the bed on which Napoleon died in St. Helena. But the emptre fell, the cold breath of war and revolution swept over France, sparing not even Malmaison, which had changed hands. Among the ruins surrounding Parls it stood, a melancholy wreck, last remnant of the imperial fortune, empty like a plundered mansion, in a park torn up by the feet of horses. Such is the historical account of that famous house from its origin to its final decay.

FOR FOURTH OF JULY.

Arrangements Perfecting for a Grand Celebration.

Fourth of July celebration has deter mined that it will be a big thing, and will make energetic efforts in that direction. The committee met last even ing at Justice Morrison's courtroom the members all being present, and Chairman F. J. Cressey presented an address to the citizens of Los Angeles city and county, prepared by him as a committee. The address was re-ferred to a committee, consisting of the chairman, Capt. Overton, and Mr. Farquhar, for some additional consid distant past were ten liftle pictures on a layer of cement covered with stuceo, representing Apollo Musagetes and the Nine-Muses, unique examples of Greek art. which were presented to Mme. Bonaparte on her visit to Italy by the King of Naples. Of all these works of art, none remain today but a few pictures belonging to the family of Lenctenberg in Russia.

Ex-Gov. Lienel A. Sheldon reported era California and Terminal railroads have agreed to grant half-fare over all their lines to Los Angeles and re-turn on July 4 and 5. For Pesadena the round trip fare will be 25 certs for July 4 and 5. Other roads had not for July 4 and 5. Other roads had not yet been heard from by the committee. Capt. Overton, of the Committee to Outline a Programme for the Celebration, reported a plan which had been manimously adopted by the committee, and it was adopted likewise manimorsly by the Executive Committee. The programme provides for a grand parade, the marching time to be set for 930 a.m., and to include every desirable organization of the city and shable organization of the city and county that may be obtainable. The line of march to be as follows: Forming at Central Park, moving

"What! So your Bonaparte still refuses to go. Shall we then never be able to get rid of him. His presence interferes with us and spoils our negotiations; he must know very well that we don't want any more of him! . . . General, you may tell Bonaparte from me that if he does not decide to start this very night, I shall have him arrested tomorrow morning, and if necessary will even arrest him myself." way, north on Broadway to Third street, east on Third to Main, north on Main to Temple Block, south on Spring to Fifth, west on Fifth to Cen-tral Park, around the park and dis-

At Central Park, after disbanding, there will be music and speaking. In the evening at 8 o'clock there will be music and speaking at Hazard's Pavilien.

The committee did not recommend These words were spoken by the hero of Auerstadt.

Although accustomed for a week past to submit to such insults, the Emperor could no longer restrain his anger and indignation when Flabout reported to him the threatening words of the man he had made Prince of Eckmuhl.

"Let him come then!" he cried, 'strikink his breast wich elenched fists, "let him come, I am ready for him with throat bared!" anything further, believing that it would be better to exhaust the ener gies of the management and the possibilities of the situation on what has been specified and make them creditable.

The parade will include a float of the Goddess of Liberty and forty-four children, appropriately dressed to represent the States of the Union, the "Little Red Schoolhous," and any other floats that may be contributed without expense to, and approved by, the Executive Committee. An appropriate silk banner will be given to each public school and Sunday-school organization in the parade, and a handsome prize banner to the public school company turning out the largest number of children; a prize to the best-mounted organization, to the best-drilled company of militia, best dec-orated horseman, best decorated carriage, best decorated dismounted mun, and best decorated foot organization, decorations to mean only a display of the colors red, white and blue, all prizes to be handsome banners of the national colors, suitably inscribed.

At the suggestion of Chairman Cressey, the secretary was directed to write to the Postmaster-General, requesting that the letter-carriers be permitted to join in the parade.

Mr. de Groct reported that he had secured rooms in Odd Fellows' Hall, on South Main street, for Fourth of July headquarters.

Arrangements were made for get-ing out the school children in the parade, the line of march being sho t-ened for that purpose, and all neces-sary provisions will be made for their safety. A committee from Rosedale reported that a company of 125 is already enrolled there to be in the parheart."

And thus it is that, thanks to the ingratitude of the Napoleon party and the culpable indifference of the French government, the chateau of Malmaison will very scon, with its lovely vision-haunted park, submit to destruction.

The work of arranging for the celebration will now go rapidly forward.
The meetings of the Executive Com-mittee will hereafter be held at the headquarters every Saturday evening.

An Insane Man's Mania for Breaking Furniture.

sions by a rapid historic survey of Mai-maison, which is situated about nine miles from Far's, on the road to St. Gefmain. The name of the village dates, it is said, from the invasion of the Normans in the ninth century. These marauders remained for some time, and their presence proved fatal to the neighborhood, so that the place received the rame of Mala Manelo. In 1244 Maimaison was a kind of barn, so to speak, dependent on the commune of Reiul. In the fourteenth century the fief paid homage to the abbey of St. Denis. In 1622 a counsellor in the Parliament of Paris called Perrot, was lord of Maimai-son, and took its name. It then became successively the property of the Barontin family, the controleur-general of Sichelles. The patrol wagon was sent to No. 623 Philadelphia street yesterday for a crazy man, who was reported breaking up all the furniture in his house. The unfortunate individual is S. H. Keeler, who was persuaded to take a ride with the officers without much difficulty. He was taken to the County Jail and will probably be committed to the asylum at Highlands, as his insanity is of a pronounced type. His wife stated to the officers that he has always been an exceptionally good man, but of late has been subject to attacks of dementia, which took the form of a desire to destroy things in the house. He became more violent each time and at length Mrs. Keeler came to the conclusion that the only remedy was to lock him up. When arrested yesterday he was in the act of tearing up all the clothing in the house and had smashed some of the furniture. the furniture in his house. The unfortu-Mme. On this subject some remarks may be borrowed from the diary of Isabey:

"Mme. Bonaparte occupied at this time the little house in the rue Chauteraine, which had belonged to Talma, but the general, who desired actitude for personal reasons, whiching to escape from curiosity and importunate solicitations, spoke of purchasing a country place in the neighborhood of Paris. Having heard of this, Mme. le Coulteux, with whom I was intimately acquainted, requested me to make overtures to Mme. Bonaparte on the aubject of a property she possessed near Reiul. Mme. Bonaparte consented to visit it. I accompanied her, and the acquisition of Malmaison was made that very day."

"The chateau was far from possessing the conditions of elegance and comfort for the wife of the genral-in-chief of the army in Italy. The rooms were barely furnished and the walls in a splorable state of decay. Thanks, howe r., to the good taste of the lady of the m nor, and the talent of Touraine, things m re soon made more presentable."

More Criticisms on "Coin's Financial School."

The Assertions of the Youthful Sil to Ridicule.

Mr. "Coin" is Now Actively En-gaged Hunting for a Hole in Which to Hide His Greatly Diminished Head.

The Times yesterday morning printed a full synopsis of the work entitled "Coin's Financial School," published lest year in Chicago, and which, ever since its publication, has been attracting much attention, more especially, perhaps, with those having or feeling an interest in the great financial question of silver. The 'published synopsis in yesterday's Times was followed by the first three chapters of a pampfalet, criticising the work, ent.tled "Coin's Financial Fool," written by thorace White, editor of the New York Evening Post, a gentleman who is recognized as an authority on questions of finance, and whose expressions of opinion on any subject are worthy of the highest consideration. The Times now publishes this morning a continuation of Mr. White's criticisms, and the concluding portion of them will be published tomorrow.

CHAPTER IV.

It is a common remark among those who have been taken in by "Coin's Financial School' that the writer of it "makes everything so plain." The Rev. John Jasper had the same advantage over the followers of Gailleo, when he said "the sun do move." When the Rev. J. pointed to the orb of day in the heavens, everybody could see that it passed slowly from east to west. What more do you want? What better evidence could you have than that of your eyes?

See how plain the young man makes the whole subject of money in a single sentence on p. 8, viz: "Gold was considered the money of the rich. It was owned principally by that class of people, and the poor people seldom ever saw any of it."

This is introduced as a reason why (as he says) Congress in 1792 made the silver dollar the monetary unit. We have already shown that Congress did nothing of the kind. It follows that Congress never advanced any such reason, but "Cooin" having introduced it in this deft way, recurs to it at frequent intervals as a settled fact that gold is the rich man's money and silver the poor man's money. Argai, all poor men ought to be in favor of silver.

and silver the poor man's money. Argal, all poor men ought to be in favor of silver.

This is very plain as iong as you do not consider what the poor man wants money for. If he wants it as pay for his services, as an accumulation for sickness and a reliance in old age, he wants the best money going, not the worst. If poor money is the right thing for the poor man, there are several kinds poorer than silver, copper for example. This was once legal-tender and it had a legal ratio with silver. In the Roman republic the ratio was 240 to 1. and the contemporary Greek ratio was 250 to 1. Is there any more reason for poor men having poor money than for having ragged clothes, bad flour and ranch butter? Is there any reason why the poor should not have the same standard of value as the rich, just as they have the same Bible, the same sunlight, and the same atmosphere? For it is not the mere handling of gold that is of importance here, but the value of the thing handled. This may be copper, nickel, silver, or paper, and most commonly will be those things, since our people do not tike to carry gold. It wears out their pockets and their pockets wear out the gold. So long as the various things they carry will bring gold on demand, and so long as a stability of value is secured to them equal to that of gold (be the same more or less,) all requirements are satisfied. It will be easy now to crase every suggestion in "Coin's Financial School" that the poor man needs a different kind of money from the rich man, and when these are all erased a large part of the book will be wiped out.

The next plece of lucidity we find is

SILVER AS A HUMAN BEING. The next piece of lucidity we find is akin to the last. It is on p. 16: "It (Congress) then deprived silver of its right to unrestricted free coinage and de-stroyed it as legal-tender money in the pay-ment of debts, except to the amount of

This is accompanied with a picture of Senator Sherman cutting off the head of a woman called silver, whose blood spouts in every direction—a valuable aid to a people earnestly seeking to know the woman balled silver, whose blood spouts in every direction—a valuable aid to a people carnessly seeking to know the truth about a momentous public question. To all such let it be said that silver is not a woman, that it is not a human being, that it is not even an animal, and hence that it has no more "rights" than a head of cabbage and that nobody but a cabbage head would be deceived by such nonsense. Yet a considerable part of "Coin's" collection of funny pictures and comic literature is made up of hints, suggestions and assertions that silver has been treated with cruelty and opprobrium, while gold has been petted and pampered. If we should say that corn has been mostly banished to the cattle-yard and pigpen, while wheat has been elevated to the kitchen and dining-room, and should make this the foundation of a demand for equal rights for cereals, the logic would be the same. What sort of conception can anybody have of the intelligence of the American people who thinks that their blood can be stirred by a picture of silver as Cock Robin in the throes of death from an arrow shot by gold? This is called making the science of finance clear to the common people, just as the Rev. John Jasper did with the science of astronomy.

The next contribution to clearness is a picture representing "Bimetallism 1872" and "Monometallism 1894," the former and "Monometallism 1894," the former ebowing the workingman and his little offid in a high state of prosperity and contentment, and the latter showing him in the last extreme of famine and wretchedness. This does not require much notice. The printer's devil might have thanged the labels, in which case the pictures would have served equally well so far as any intellectual purpose goes. But one fact ought to be borne in mind. In 1872 we had neither silver nor gold. There was no "metallism" in it. Specie payments were not restored till seven years later. Therefore the label "Bimetallism 1872" is itself a lie, without regard to the condition of trade and industry at that time. This was, in fact, quite as bad as it was in 1894, being on the eve of one of the most disastrous panies in our history.

CHAPTER V .- THE "CRIME OF 1873," The next statement of importance is on p. 20, where it is stated that "silver was demonstized secretly."

p. 20, where it is stated that "silver-was demonetized secretly."

It is not generally easy to prove a negative, but it can be done in this case, because there is no way to pass a law secretly in the Congress of the United States. Every bill must be printed and agust be read publicly in each branch. These proceedings are incompatible with secrecy. This bill was printed thirteen times in the course of its passage through Congress, and the proceedings on it occupy 144 columns of the Congressional Globe, which was published daily during the session. That does not look much like secrecy.

lently, by the mere omission of the colarfrom the list of authorized coins, and that this omission was not noticed. By whom was it not noticed? This law was passed twenty-two years ago. Men are now voters who were not born at that time. Of course if was not noticed by them. Neither law nor custom requires that the particular clauses of bills in Congress should be noticed by people who are not members of Congress. The clause in question was not a mere omission of one coin from a list of coins. As the bill passed the House and went to the Senate it was in these words:

words:

"That the silver coins of the United States shall be a dollar, a half-dollar or 50-cent piece, a quarter-dollar or 25-cent piece, a dime or 10-cent piece; and the weight of the dollar shall be 384 grains: the half-dollar, quarter-dollar, and dime shall be respectively one-half, one-quarter and one-tenth of the weight of said dollar, which coins shall be a legal tender for their nominal value for any amount not exceeding five dollars in any one payment."

Second Session, Forty-second Congress, p. 2305.

"Sec. 16 re-enacts the provisions of existing laws defining the silver coins and their weights respectively, except in relation to the silver dollar, which is reduced in weight from four hundred and twelve and a half to three hundred and eighty-four grains, thus making it a subsidiary coin in harmony with the silver coins of less denomination, to secure its concurrent circulation with them. The silver dollar of four hundred and twelve and a half grains, by reason of its builton or intrinsic value being greater than its nominal vaue, long since ceased to be a coin of circulation, and was melted by manufacturers of silverware. It does not circulate now in commercial transactions with any country, and the convenience of those manufacturers in this respect can better be met by supplying small standard bars of the same standard, avolding the useless expense of coining the dollar for that purpose. The coinage of the half dime is discontinued for the reason that its place is supplied by the copper-nickel five-cent plece, of which a large issue has been made, and which, by the provisions of the act authorizing its issue, is redeemable in United States currency."—(Ibid., 2806.

Mr. Stoughton said:

been made, and which, by the principles of the act authorizing its issue, is redeemable in United States currency."—(Ibid., 2306.

Mr. Stoughton said:

"Aside from the three-dollar gold piece, which is a deviation from our metrical ratio, and therefore objectionable, the only change in the present law is in more clearly specifying the gold dollar as the unit of value. This was probably the intention and, perhaps the effect of act of March 3, 1849, but it ought not be left to inference or implication. The value of silver depends, in a great measure, upon the fluctuations of the market, and the supply and demand. Gold is practically the standard of value among all civilized nations, and the time has come in this country when the gold dollar should be distinctly declared to be the coln representative of the money unit."—(Ibid., p. 2308.

Mr. Potter said:

"Then, in the next place, this bill provides for making of changes in the legal tender coin of the country, and for substituting as legal tender coin of only one inetal instead as heretofore of two. I think myself this would be a wise provision, and that legal tender coins, except subsidiary coins, should be of gold alone; but why should we legislate on this now when we are not using either of those metals as a circulating medium? The bill provides also for a change in respect of the weight and value of the silver dollar, which I think is a subject, which, when we come to require legislation at all, will demand at our hands very serious consideration, and which, as we are not using such coin for circulation now, seems at this time to be an unnecessary subject about which to legislate."—(Ibid., p. 2310.

Mr. Kelley said:

"I wish to ass; the gentlemap who has at this time to be an unnecessary subject about which to legislate."—(Ibid., p. 2310.

Mr. Kelley said:
"I wish to ask the gentleman who has just spoken (Mr. Potter) if he knows of any government in the world which makes its subsidiary coinage of full value? The sliver coin of England is 10 per cent. below the value of gold coin. And, acting under the advice of the experts of this country, and of England and France, Japan has made her sliver coinage, within the last year, 12 per cent. below the value of gold coin, and for this reason: It is impossible to retain the double standard. The values of gold and sliver continually fluctuate. You cannot determine this year what will be the relative values of gold and silver next year. They were 15 to 1 a short time ago; they are 16 to 1 now.

half-dellar is worth as much as the whole dellar was in 1873. Suppose this were true, what about debts that were contracted on the gold basis yesterday? There has been no great decline in the prices or commodities in that time. Moreover, people did not agree to pay and receive commodities, but dollars. The question in the forum of morals is not what a dollar will but you what a dollar will not buy as many useful things as it would in 1873. Suppose in that case, creditors should say that when they made their contracts, a dollar would buy twice as many useful articles as it will now, and ask Congress to pass a law making the dollar twice as large as before. What sort of answer would be that the government had chosen the most stable thing it could find to serve as the material for the dollar; that it never intended to guarantee the purchasing power of the dollar in terms of any other article or articles, and that any attempt to do so in the interest of a class would be dishonest. Equally dishonest is the demand that the dollars bethand In the interest of another class.

CHAPTER VI—THE DEBATE WITH LY-CHAPTER VI—THE DEBATE WITH LY-MAN J. GAGE.

MAN J. GAGE.

We shall now examine something which bas the outward semblance of an argument. It is that part which embraces the colloquy with L. J. Gage. Mr. Gage, says "Coin," asked the question: "How can you have, at any fixed ratio, the same commercial value on two separate metals that are from time to time varying in the quantity of each produced?" To which "Coin" made an elaborate answer, beginning thus:

the New York Evening Post, viz.:

HOLLAND HOUSE (New York.)

April 8, 1895.

To the Editor of the Evening Post—Sir:
In answer to your inquiry about "Coin's
Financial School," and my name as it appears in a certain lecture described therein.
I beg to say that I never asked any such lecture, that I never asked any such questions, or made any such answers, as are there set forth. It is a fabrication from beginning to end. I have had many letters from all parts of the country, inquiring whether or not I was correctly reported in the alleged discussion, all of which I have answered in the negative. It is time the truth was put on foot to overtake the lie.

Truly yours,

ANOTHER FIB.

Before leaving this lecture we will notice one other faisification (on p. 30. Speaking of various laws which have aided to depress silver, he mentions "the law of 1878 authorizing and sanctioning notes, bonds and mortgages to be taken payable in gold only." This latter, says "Coin." "is a clause in the Bland-Allison act. . . It discriminates against all our forms of money and allows the creditor to dictate that his credits shall be payable in gold."

The clause in question made no difference whatever in the status of debtor and creditor, or in that of silver and gold. The Supreme Court had decided long before this time that the right to make a contract payable in gold, or in any other kind of money that the parties might choose, was a constitutional right, and that such contracts were enforceable according to their terms. The Bland-Allison act, therefore, merely conformed to the fundamental law of the land when it said that the silver dollars coined under it should be legal tender "except where otherwise expressly situated in the contract." Therefore the statement that the act in question "discriminates against all our other forms of money" is another ile added to an already extensive assortment.

advance in value, not only the kind of horses desired, but also other horses upon which there would be a demand to take the places of the horses sold to the govern-ment."

which there would be a demand to take the places of the horses sold to the government."

Here we are favored with a picture of horses as an ald to the understadding. This reply escened conclusive to the audience, for it was followed by a clapping of hands, and poor Waish had nothing to say for himself till some time later. Now let us test this proposition by a recent swent in our own history. In the year 1890 the aliver men in Congress said to their opponents: "Give us a law authorizing the purchase by the government of 4,600,000 cunces of sliver each month. This will create a demand and cause the price to advance." Senator Jones of Nevada said k would cause sliver to advance to par, i.e., 1.29.29 per ounce, the price then being 1.07 per ounce, the price then being 1.07 per ounce. Congress did what the sliver men asked it to do. And what was the result? There was a brief speculation in sliver. The price rose from $1.07 to $1.16 per ounce. The government began in the middle of August buying 4,500,000 ounces per month, and the price began to fall.

And this is the way it went down; the quotations are taken from the Mint Report:

PRICE PER OUNCE.

PRICE PER OUNCE you have, at any first clinic ways agreed to the commercial value on two separate metals to commercial value on two separate metals and the commercial value on two separate metals and the commercial value on the commercial value of the commercial tory has many lamentable examples where the law compelled people to accept much less than they had bargained for—con-tinental money, for example. But it is firmly denied that the law can compel people in this country to make future bar-gains in silver if they prefer to make gains in silver if they prefer to make them in gold.

Continuing this lecture, we come to the following statement (p. 52:)

"The demonetization of silver destroyed one-half of the redemption thoney of the United States. It did it in this way: By making gold the unit and closing the mints to silver, it lessened the demand for silver, and its commercial value at once began to depreciate, as measured in gold."

The demonetization of silver did not destroy a dollar of redemption money, because there was none at that time of either silver or gold. There can be no redemption money without redemption. Even if we had been redeeming our greenbacks' at that time, we should not have redeemed any with silver, because, as "Coin" tells us on p. 19:

"At the time the United States demonetized silver, in February, 1873, silver, as measured in gold, was worth $1.02."

Is it likely that the government would have bought silver at 2 per cent, premium to redeem its greenbacks with, when it could redeem them with gold at par? That 4s what "Coin" wants his echolars to believe.

"Here Mr. Wakeh arose again, and 'Coin' paused to hear the question" p. 54:)

This seems to be the proper place to

Thought= People:

The newspapers today are filled with advertisements of medicines and unknown medical compounds. Those who are suffering buy merely because an ingenious writer of advertisements tells them that he has a cure for any and all ailments. Sickness may come without warning, even though a person is extremely careful of exposure; and then, again, an overtaxed mind or body courts disease, and cannot shake it off when once it fastens upon them. Many persons are sound mentally and physically, and yet they have an ALL-GONE FEELING during the day and when they wake up in the morning. Symptoms of this kind indicate that the system needs a sustenant, for which the nerves cry aloud. Temporary rest and comparative health are obtained by the use of CALIFORNIA WINE. It is not alone in California that were has been selling at a unrously-low price. A Greek journal states that so great is the quantity of wine mow in stock on the Island of Cyprus that last year's crop remains a glut on the market, and if we are to believe further accounts wine there has become cheaper than water. In the village of Tschakistra, a merchant who was having a house built is said to have provided the masons with wine instead of water to mix with the moretar.

ne Mr. Dana-he of the New York Meantime Mr. Dana—he of the New York Sun, which is supposed to "shine for all"—still persists that the price of California wines in New York is too high since the recent combination of wine men was formed in San Francisco. Mr. Dana says:
"As to the recent advance in the price of California red wines, one does not need to be a buyer of them to ascertain that it has been discouraging to dealers here," or that it has given encouragement to forten competitors of American wine-makers.

that it has given encouragement to forsign competitors of American wine-makers.
Let the wholesale price go back, as Ferdimand Frohman of the California WineAssociation seems to believe it should, to is cents a gailon in San Francisco, and we apprehend there will be no trouble in noding a market here for a great part of the unnual product of 10,000,000 or 15,100,000 gallons of which the newly-formed company has obtained control. If Caliturnia people desire to hold their ground in this part of the country they must furmain red wines as good as the French, at a price as low, as the French. The question is one of both cost and quality."
There are a good many California winemakers who would be pleased to get 45 sonts a gallon, or anything near that figme, for good, sound wine. As The Times has shown, the price of wine at the vineard has gone to desperately low, in some aces even touching 7 cents a gallon, that twas a question of life and death for the manufacturers to combine and get a twing rate for their product. Otherwise the California wine industry would soon tive become a thing of the past.
The trouble with the New Yorkers upcars to be that while they are perfectly villing to pay $1 or $1.50 a bottle for California wine with a French label on it, they expect to get the native product, when its sold as California wine, for about the me price as milk.

If they had been, the recent rains would have brought them out of the difficulty, but in most cases they did not and the puzzle is unsolved to many of the wheat-raisers. They have not examined the roots to see if this new destroyer has taken possession of their fields. If, on pulling up the grain, the roots are found covered with the film of web-like coating, the farmer may expect little wheat from that particular field, and may profitably spend some hours looking for the yet undiscovered eradicator of the evil.

Wholesale Quotations Revised Dally.

LOS ANGELES, May 11, 1895.

A new lot of butter arrived from the north today and prices were marked up 2½c all around. Eggs are now verging on 14c. New potatoes, small, can be had for $1. Larger stock holds at old quotations. Strawberrles are firmer, also gooseberrles. New cherrles can be had more plentifully at 75c. (The following quotations are for average grades of the products mentioned. For an extra choice article a somewhat better price than the highest quotate can usually be obtained, while for a product of decidedly interior quality the seller will probably have to accept less than the lowest published quotation.) Pacific Mail opened 1 per cent. lower on the announcement that the negotiations with the Panama Rallroad Company had been abandoned, but the decline had been fully recovered at the close. The week has been notable by reason of the great activity in stocks, the wide distribution of business, the material advances recorded, and the large buying for foreign account. Another prominent feature was the demoralization of the sterring exchangemarket, rates at the close showing a reduction of 2d in both long and short bills. The tracking was at times attended by consistent of the beautiful to the prices at which uregard to the prices at which uregard to the prices at which urchases had been made. Some ninety shares touched figures higher than a Commission-houses reported a food of orders from the prominent financial tooks, including Sugar, but the character of the general news in circulation was of such a nature as to inspire confidence. The sharp recession in the rates of exchange led to talk of gold exports in the near future. The sales of the week aggregated 2,440,000 shares, and 155 stocks were traded in. The, bond speculation today was active and buyant, with gales of $3,280,00.

During the week the trading in mortgages was on a scale of mammoth proportions, the sales aggregating $23,500,000, a total which has not been recorded in most of the securities dealt in, the distribution of business being wider than tsual, and extending to bonds which have not been traded in for wares have been recorded in most of the securities dealt in, t

PASADENA, May 11.—(Special Corre-powdence.) Pasadena has set herself to rork to abolish all street nuisances, and e enforce existing ordinances tending to conforce existing ordinances tending to alke her a truly metropolitan city, with b lingering rural nations or crude sur-undings. Among the things which are a the list of the Street Superintendent, to the barbed-wire nulsances, which still dist in some portions of the town, and to the bane of pedestrians, especially of are the bane of pedestrians, especially of the feminine kind, who daily leave frag-ments of their clothing as trophies upon the pronged points of the fence that is more of an "offence" than any other sort. proper material for surrounding city lots. Children have been badly hurt by falling against these fences, and there has been much complaint in every quarter of the town where they are in use. There is an ordinance against them, and from this time forth that ordinance will be most tixeldly enforced. The Street Superintentent has mapped out a plan of campaign, which will take in the barbed-wire fences along Pasadena avenue, Walnut street, Mary and De Lacy streets, and every street and alley in the city where they are in use. He has determined that the complaints are founded in justice, and, as they are oper material for surrounding city lots. and alley in the city ware they are in the title. He has determined that the complaints are founded in justice, and, as they are backed up by law, he will see to it that tearbed wire is removed from every thoroughfare within the corporate limits of the town without delay. The raid will begin on Monday and will continue until there is not a single barbed-wire fence left to disfigure the streets. There is an official realization of the fact that ordinances that ordain are what is wanted here, and among the other regulations that will be strictly enforced from this time forward, will be the numbering of houses within the limits of the town. The citizens have been appealed to in regard to the matter, and the danger to our free-delivery system of mail pointed out, but there is the customary apathy in conforming to the request. Now it is discovered that the Street Superintendent has power to compel citizens to properly number their houses. ower to compel citizens to properly num-er their houses, and he will proceed to

CARELESSNESS AT CROSSINGS.

The carelessness of some of the engi-eers upon the Terminal Railway in fail-The Carelessness of some of the engineers upon the Terminal Railway in falling to ring the belt and blow the whistle as required by law at crossings, has been the subject of eevere criticism in Paradena, since the accident of a formight ago, which resuited so disastrously to Albert Gilmore. That another accident, of a far more serious character, did not occur this morning was sheer luck, and it was what is technically known as "a close call." An electric car bound to Los Angeles, approached the Terminal track crossing and the hind it was a train upon the Terminal track bound in the same direction. There was no clairm given as the crossing was approached, and the electric car was in such great danger of being run down that one nervous lady jumped from it, to escape what seemed certain death. That there was carelessness on the part of the bottoneer and that of the engineer, goes without saying, for it is a rule of the company that all cars must stop at railway crossings, and it is hoped that this marrow escape may prove a warning for the future.

The electric road reports a rushing business for the week, and receipts averaging $70 daily for each of the five cars, that amount represents a total of about 450 passengers daily for each car, which is about their full capacity. The success of the new road is assured, and with the tarting up of the second engine next week there will be an increased speed in the running of the cars, that will bring them to the schedule time. The material for the double tracking has arrived, and the work will be pushed. It is said by the company that the double track will be completed in about two weeks, as they intend to put as large a force upon the work as can be easily handled.

official journal of this city upon an ordinance drawn and introduced by the present City Attorney before the Trustees for their consideration, upon the assessing of city taxes, etc., is pretty severe and sarcastic, and the reflections of the same paper upon his definition of "intoxication" one full of humor.

The Trustees have ordered that a test be made in public this afternoon of the new chemical engine (the Hoilloway) just received, and to this end an immense pile of old lumber, old boxes, debris, etc., is this afternoon collected on the vacant lot east of the engine house to be fired for the purpose of making such test. SANTA ANA, May 11.—(Special Correspondence.) It has been lonesome in Santa Ana today. The little tots that are usually seen around over town have been out on a pionic. The different Sunday-schools of the city have banded together and have concluded to go out on a pionic once every year and see to it that all the little boys and girls—especially those in the Sunday-schools, have ways provided for them to get out with the crowd.

schools, have ways provided for them to get out with the crowd.

Today the schools went up to Santiago Canyon on the first annual auting. The little folks assembled at their respective churches at 8:30 o'clock this morning and by 9 o'clock the procession, headed by Grand Marshai S. H. Finley, mounted on a fine charger, and the Santa Ana drum corps, started on the march through the city. The procession was a quarter of a mile long and the many happy and expectant little faces of which it was composed, made many older people want to join in with them and accompany them to the mountain canyon, just to see them romp and play, to shout and enjoy themselves as only children can.

The following Sunday-schools were included in the procession in the following order: Baptist, Caristian, Congregational, German Evangelical, Holmes, Methodist Episcopal, Methodist South, Presbyterian and United Presbyterian.

BICYCLE AGAINST RACEHORSE. BICYCLE AGAINST RACEHORSE. A contest was signed this evening between Jack Prince, the long-distance bicycle champion, and Tom Raymond, owner of Klamath, the trotting horse, for a race, to take place in Santa Ana next Wednesday, at 2 p.m. The race is to be in half-mile heats, best two in three, for a purse of $400. Klamath has a record of 2:12½, and the race will be a spirited one. A running horse, drawing a cart, on which will be a screen for a windbreak, will be just ahead of Prince, this being a concession granted by Raymond, who is confident the horse can best the blke. On the Thursday after the race Raymond and Klamath will start for Denver.

is seen two and three hundred of the old boys, together with many of their wives and a few invited friends, assembled in the early part of the evening to find that Comrade Lane had transformed his comfortable home into army headquarters. The Stars and Stripes were floating in the front yard; tens were pitched round about the house and a little to one side was the commissary—a department that not one of the old fellows failed to thoroughly inspect during the evening before having taken their departure.

By 9 o'clock the guests and their friends were comfortably seated in a large tent, and after God's blessing had been invoked upon the assemblage by Rev. McIntler of Santa Ana, the "Stan-spangled Banner" sung by six young ladies, aroused any latent patriotism that may have been lurking around as a result of advancing years with many of the old warriors. Following this selection Comrade Lane, as host, welcomed the guests in a neat little speech; stating that this was the first annual reunion of the soldiers in Orange county; that if he lived twenty-five years more—and he knew he would in such a grand climate as they had in Garden Grove—he proposed to bring the "old boys" together once every year that they might indulge in reminiscences of the past and look the festive bean square in the face. Comrade Scott of Santa Ana replied to this welcome, stating that for many years before coming West, over 1000 of the "boys" were present. He also stated that Comrude Lane knew well the character of the men he had assembled before him, and that at the hast reunforn he held in Hilmers, before coming West, over 1000 of the "boys" were present. He also stated that Comrude Lane knew well the character of the men he had seembled before him, and that knowing this, he had every chicken within two miles of Garden Grove under look and key. He gave this bit of information to the "old fellows," so he said, that they might not waste any unnecessary time in reconnoitering.

Miss Mina Robinson was next most heartily applauded at the conclusion of the soio, "Sherman's March to the Sea." After a selection on the plane and violins, Miss Mabel Moody read that touching old was story, "Why He Would Not Sell the

was story, "Why He. Wou'd Not Sell the Farm."

"As they say in court, the next thing on the docket," announced Comrade Lane, "is 'Beana!" Everybody "fell back to dead," and in a very short time the ammunition—beans, coffee, hartack and brown sugar—were before the attentive forces and were used without stint, many of the old warriors preferring to use the pan plates of beans and tin-cups of coffee together—by twos and threes—just as they did in the sixties.

After mess a vote of thanks was extended to Comrade Lane and wife, and the post commander at Garden Grove, as well as to the choir of young ladies and to Miss Mina Robinson, and then followed a brief literary and musical programme, after which the usual camp-fire was held, and a prize awarded to the soldier telling the most truthful story. Some very thrulling and blood-curding tales resulted from a close application of this portion of the programme, but after a spirited context the prize—a large pleee of hard-tack decorated with red, white and blue, was awarded to Comrade Judge Everett of Santa Ana. The evenlng's entertalimment was concluded with Comrade Dr. Menges of Santa Ana Comrade Judge Everett of Santa Ana. The evening's entertainment was concluded with Comrade Dr. Menges of Santa Ana giving his experience in army trading. Thus closed the first amual soldiers' reunion in Orange county, and the old warriors returned to their homes feeling at least ten years younger than before they had indulged in the reminiscences and partaken of the festivities of the evening.

A GENTLEWOMAN FARMER.

SUCCESSFUL CAREER OF MRS. P. TABER-WILLETS.

She Earns Much, Raises Fine Blooded Stock, Yet Does Not Want to Vote or Have More Rights.

[From a Special Contributor.]

Every year in the past decade has seen one or two new callings added to the feminize possibilities of bread-winning and the lively statistician is usually on hand the lively statistician is usually on hand times, however, so quietly do they work, the statistician overlooks them, and up to date has not suspected what a mine of rich surprises lay under the name of S. P. Taber-Willets. FEW KNOW HER SEX.

A number of judges of horseflesh credi Taber-Willets with raising as smart trot-ters and handsome roadsters as can be found in a long day's journey, and negotifound in a long day's journey, and negotiating sales of the same with shrewd, sound business sense. Now and then some dealer in and lover of horses makes a short trip out to Taber-Willets farm on Long Island, and stares with open-mouthed surprise at the appearance of the proprietar tripping down to meet him. The naturally preconceived notion of a tall, possibly booted and probably heavily-bearded horsey man vanishes at the sight of a very small lady, whose unusually bright brown eyes, under the visor of a rough blue cloth Scatch cap, beam with an amount of intelligent vivacity positively inspiring.

With a cheerful laugh she acknowledges she is Mrs. Phoebe Taber-Willets, and, standing on the piazza of her charming old brick farmhouse, surveys as monarch supreme about four hundred acres of as valuable farm land as there is on Long Island. In addition, the place is fitted with model barns and a big dairy, is stocked with pigs, cows, chickens, pigeons, a troop of handsome dogs and thirty odd valuable horses, all under the management of this one quiet woman who made her beginnings some fifteen years

sorrow, with no experience, the disapproval of her family, three small boys looking to her for support and with a very little bit of money to work on, she took charge of the farm. As her father had been a prosperous farmer of Duchess county, N. Y., before her, she at least had natural associations with country life and cattle, so her first experiments were made in selling off her common cows, buying a few handsome Guernseys and marketing the butter and milk among her neighbors.

The cow stable and dairy were under her direct supervision, and once established with a small herd of fine cattle, she added to the sales from butter and milk the price of her caives, so bringing her profits up as high as ten thousand a year. The success with the cows only served to arouse more ambitious projects, and five years ago she purchased three brood mares, a fine stallion and announced her intention of raising as fine horses as the New York market could demand. A shrewd calculation had proved to her that success in horse breeding meant bigger profits in the end, and after patient waiting she sold last year her first pair of carriage horses and one of her young mares came back to the farm bringing a fine trotting record.

The dairy and cows are giving place now to the more important and interesting model stables full of box stalls, big harness rooms, and the pasture land is divided into paddocks where precious little long-legged colts are frolicking this spring.

THE STEEP ROAD TO SUCCESS.

THE STEEP ROAD TO SUCCESS.

Hard work and long patience were the chief investments Mrs. Taber-Willets says she made. In the days of boginnings every bit of detail work was under her eyes, laboring men she directed, the farmer worked under her command and the game was not afways easy or amusing. Often on of bitzard winter nights at 10 o'clock she went, lantern in hand, to have a look at the rows, and finding the stableman very much the worse for the cup that cheers, was obliged to be up again at 4 the next morning to see that all went well. She mapped out and directed the building of her berns and stablea, the digging of wells, making of fences and keeping up of general farm repairs.

Her practice was to build stoutly and well, but lavish no expense on showy luxuries. No grass has ever been allowed to grow upder the feet of this woman, who managed the sales and purchases of cattle, who was able to ask $50 apiece for her calves and 50 cents a pound THE STEEP ROAD TO SUCCESS.

What is

CASTORIA

Casteria is Dr. Samuel Piccher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves tecthing troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea-the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for chil-dren. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children." Da. G. C. Osgoon

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by foreing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending om to premature graves.

shor from her shoulders and the farm after long nutruing, is ready to reward her with a steady income from the horses, she can stop to smile over the discouragements that fell in her path.

One of her sons, after his mother had put him through college, is now in business for himself, and having achieved her aim this clever woman by no means folds her hands in complaisant ease. The active, outdoor life fills her with an amazing vigor, and the confinement of the house is irksome to so lively a body. Over her plain little gown of black cashmere, the round skirt of which comfortably escapes the ground all about, she wears a vast blue checked apron; her feet are suitably clad in broad-toed, thick-soled shoes, there is a dainty bit of ruching at her throat, her silvering hair waves prettily under the Scotch cap, and though she is in and yout of, the stables all day, tramps over fields and braves bad weather, she has no desire or need for the trousers that dress reformers so yearn after. Neither does she care for a vote nor stand for her rights. The only opposition and discouragements she ever met with were from the feminine members of her family and "women friends. Met, she says, have gladly elected her to the Guernsey Club, buy her cattle, admire her achievements and meet her fairly and respectfully in all business matters, and all the while she never found it necessary to assume the least mascullinity of air or manner. When circumstances at intervals seemed to get tied up in hard knots she lubricated the difficulty with abundant tears and, cheered and comforted by this purely feminine device, took up work again. She krows much about the compounding of excellent chocolate cake, is fond of novels that are love stories and to dispense hospitality with a hearty lavishness inherited from her long lites of prosperous American ancessors.

(San Diego Vidette:) Water is the backbone of progress in Southern California. Without water the broad acres of this Southwestern empire would remain a trackless desert waste. With water the desert is made to "blossom as the rose." a veritable paradise for human habitation. The only reason Los Angeles has been enabled so rapidly to overcome the reaction of boom days is the development of water. The growth of outlying settlements has fostered languishing industries. Water alone has done it; and in view of extensive works now in hand for the irrigation of San Jacinto plains, portion of San Bernardino Valley and the southern portion of Mojave Desert, this prosperity will continue. While this good fortune has come to our sister city San Diego has been rainbow chasing, bragging about her future great possibilities, growing poorer every day and fighting water development, which alone can bring permanent prosperity.

A NICE PICK-UP.

A Police Clerk Makes Some Money for the City. Police Clerk Kinsey made enough money for the city the other day to pay his salary for a month and a half, at least. This is for the city the other day to pay his salary for a month and a half, at least. This is how he did it:

December 17, 1892, Justice Owens, in three cases against Chinamen for conducting lotteries, fined six defendants $200 each. On December 30 the cases were appealed to the Supreme Court, the transmitting of the papers in the appeal being about the last official act performed by Clerk Kinsey during that term of office. February 9, 1893, the Supreme Court affirmed the judgment of the lower court, but for some unexplained reason the remittitur was not sent down.

During his present term of office Mr. Kinsey looked up the matter, and had the remittitur sent down. The next step was to find the defendants and collect the fines. Two of them—Ah Quay and Ah Tai—were spected in Chiratown the other day by Policeman Harris and arrested. One of them yesterday paid his $200 fine, less $3 for three days' imprisonment in the City Jail, and was rejeased. It is stought the other will do likewise. It is also probable that some, if not all, of the remaining four defendants will be caught and mulc; ed.

Watched the Sweepers

The members of the Board of Public Works made a personal inspection last night of the manner in which the street sweeping was being done. They walked for about three miles seeing the sweepers and other apparatus at work. The sweep-ing appeared to be done better than it was a few days ago.

"I did not believe the prediction," said Dr. Clark to me, a day or two ago, "but now, two years before the expiration of the decade, there are two and a quarter million members, located in all parts of the world, and there is no telling how many more may be constrained to join the ranks. BOSTON. May 11.—Prim old Boston town as making great preparations for the reception of the myriads of pretty girls and the multitudes of stalwart young men who will gather early in July to attend the convention of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, and this is well, since the present prospects are that it will be the largest convention of any zort ever held on this earth.

Eight years ago, just after the second of the Saratoga conventions, a man said to Dr. F. E. Clark, precident of the United Society, that it would not be more than a decade, probably, before the Christian Endeavor hosts would number a was then pastor.

Dr. Clark is a trifle above the medium height, slender, though not unduly spare, with graying hair and brown mustache. The lines in his clean-cut face would ceem to indicate greater age, perhaps, than the forty-five years to which he owns, but his eyes are younger by a dozen years. Next to his personal unobtrustveness, the characteristic that chiefly impresses itself upon the visitor is his sincerity, and this is due largely to the quality of his volce, which never strikes a false note and never wavers or breaks. Dr. Clark's volce is a rare organ. In ordinary conversation it is low-keyed, but clear and distinct, without being penetrative; distinctly pleasant to the ear and without a hint of great volume. But when he steps upon the platfrom to address an audience, his tones roll out with sumprising strength and carrying power. He has yet to find the indoor meeting place he cannot fill without apparent effort; he was even able to make himself heard to the furthest limit of the vast auditorium of Madison Square Garder, when the convention was held in New York three years ago. Moreover, his splendid vocal powers lasted till the close of the convention, and the same is true of the other two chief officers of the United Society, Secretary J. W. Baer and Treasurer William Shaw.

Clark have learned German well, and their Teutonic friend has mastered En-glish. THE SOCIETY OF CHRISTIAN EN-DEAVOR.

The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor was founded February 2, 1881, Endeavor was founded February 2, 1831. in Williston Church, Portland, Me., by the Rev. Francis E. Clark, its pastor. According to the latest reports, there are 33,780 societies and 2,226,800 members. It is easier to tell where these societies are not to be found than where they are, for they now exist in every country in the world but seven—Italy, Austria, Russia, Iceland, Belgium, Sweden and Greece. The United States leads, as a matter of course, there being 7644 sociéties and 458,640 members in this country. Canada has 2446 societies, and Great Britain, 2442; Austrialia comes next with 943; India follows with 116; Madagascar with 93; Japan with 59, and other lands with less, away down to Laos, Asla, with one.

The organization is, and was from the first, intended to be strictly undenominational, the object being the building up of every church in which it finds foothold, even as the object of the first society was the building up of the Williston Church of Portland. But the Christian Endeavor Society levies no tax, exacts no tribute. It may offer counsel, but it never

DR. CLARK'S FAMILY.

Dr. Clark's family is as interesting as irimself. Mrs. Clark's enthusiasm in Endeavor work has been of the utmost assistance to her husband, but it has always been secondary to her care for the junior Clarks. It is, perhaps, because of her devotion to her children that she has done so much work for the junior branches, as the children's societies of Christian Endeavor, has been formed, with headquarters at No. 646 Washington street. more than eight thousand, and the next, at Minneapolis, over fourteen thousand. Unprecedented as was the attendance at Moneapolis, the number of delegates at the next (eleventh) convention, held in New York, was more than doubled. So numerous were they, in fact, that no accurate computation was feasible, but conservative estimates put it at 35,000, by all odds the largest number that had, ever gathered in one place to attend a convencion of any sort. The next convention was at Montreal, Canada, the first held outside the boundaries of the United States, but, despite that fact and the counter attraction of the World's Fair at Chicago, 18,000 delegates invaded the Canadian city, to the amazement of its inhabitants. At Cleveland, last year, 25,000 were present, and other uncounted thousands were kept away by the Debs railroad etrikes. Fully fifty thousand are expected at Boston.

of the society are making strenuous efforts to prevent a repetition of the experiences in New York three years ago. For, though New York was never overwhelmed before, and never has been since, by any crowd of visiting strangers, there is no doubt that she was swamped by the Christian Endeavor delegates in 1892.

SOME FEATURES OF THE CONVEN-

TION. TION.

The plans of the convention have been quite generally exploited in the newspapers, for William T. Ellis of the Boston quite generally exploited in the newspapers, for William T. Ellis of the Boston office is a man of experience and industry. Through his efforts it has been made known that there will be three great auditorlums—Mechanics' Hall and two great tents—that a feature, on Saturday, July 12, will be an open-air patriotic massmeeting on Boston Common. Less has been said of the big meeting of "juniors" to be held after the patriotic massmeeting of all the "doings." About a thousand children under 14 will take part in this. There will be a junior choir and a junior orchestra and about a hundred will participate in the special exercises. Those who take part in these will, for the time being, represent the "junior societies in all parts of the earth, and will be appropriately coatumed. Thus the "junior" representing Alaska will be clad in Alaskan dress, and will tell of the societies in that far away silce of Uncle Sam's farm.

Another feature will be the holding of noonday prayer and praise meetings at selected business places. These prayer meetings will be conducted by delegates, who will march from various headquarters, and the singing of religious songs will be as much a feature as the prayers and the exhortations. Singing is, in fact, one of the greatest features in general Christian Endeavor work.

"The most interesting singing service I ever experienced," said Mr. Ellis today, "was in Pennsylvania, on a special Christian Endeavor train, and it seemed the shortest, too, though it was fifty miles long."

It is gratifying to the authorities of the society that Boston town is displaying and the shortest that displaying a service in the society that Boston town is displaying and the society that Boston town is displaying and the sement in the second the shortest and the substance in general christian Endeavor train, and displaying and singlaying and singlaying shortest, too, though it was fifty miles iong."

It is gratifying to the authorities of the society that Boston town is displaying so much interest in the convention. Perhaps the most graceful recognition of the convention that has ever been accorded any gathering by a municipality will be visible in the public gardens and parks, when the convention meets, for in these places many flowering and ornamental plants have been so set as to form the monogram of the society and some of the society's favorite motices. It has also been arranged that no members of the police force shall be away on vacation during the four or five days of the convention.

This is fine growing weather and everything is leaping into the perfection of advancement. The days, tempered by the delightful sea breezes, are not hot, but are just such days as one enjoys to the utmost when sitting on a shaded verands, or in the shadow of tall trees with bird music and the hum of bees to fill out the pleasant programme. This is the kind of weather when I like to seek the shade of spreading boughs, and, lying on my back in the lush grasses, look up through the leaf-covered arms of the branching trees to the wonderful blue beyond, which holds memories of childhood's daydreams, when the skies bent bright above me and June's heart was in the heavens, and young life was in my heart, and never a thought

I have been compelled to sit many a time above a pool of tobacco juice that not only threatened destruction of my skirts, but which nauseated me to such an extent that I suffered from it for hours afterward. I hope you will agitate this matter, Saunterer, for the sake of long-suffering woman."

This large sum has een mestly raised already by contribution from the societies of Boston and Massachusetts chiefly. Many public-spirited citzens of this fine old town have given freely, however, as they can well afford to, for a four days' visit of 50,000 guests canot fail to result in the leaving of many times $20,000 in the coffers of Boston's merchants, boarding-housekeepers and hotels and restaurants.

If the attendance is as large as is cxpected, and each guest expends but $1 a day, the sum total will be $200,000, and the chances are that it will be nearly double that. Although most railroads will reduce their fares one-half, the sum to be pailfor railroad tickets by delegates will be commous. At the low estimate of $10 each, it will amount to a cool half million. NOVEL EXPERIENCE.

(From a Special Correspondent.)

CAIRO, April 20, 1895.—Nearly all the "places" of interest in and about Jerusalem have been collected together and are now exhibited under one roof—in the church of the Holy Sepulchre. Most travelers go there first, but they should not. One should go first to the Mount of Olives, survey and try to understand the country. It is easy to believe that this is the Garden of Gethsemane, and beyond the gulch of Jehosaphat (for it is not a valley) is the dome of the marvelous Mosque of Armar. It is easy to believe, also, that the dome of this Mosque covers the rock where Abraham was about to the control of the Armenians once that the smoke from the censor he was swinging swathed the dark faces of the others and reminded the mate it was, time to go. The Catholics, running as first section, were encountered and turned on their followers. The Greeks came nearer, and the face of the dark man was to the others and reminded the face of the dark man was to the side of the street and turned on their followers. The Greeks came nearer, and the face of the dark man was to their side of the street and turned on their followers. Most trav-elers go there first, but they should not. June's heart was in the heavens, and young life was in my heart, and never a thought had I of the world's falseness and wrong. Beautiful days of childhood, when you breathe the atmosphere of innocence, and faith is strong and trust is all unquestioning! The sunshine and the blue sky, the soft winds and the quivering leaves still seem a part of those perfect days when life to us was young and the earth without a stain.

gone a quarter of a mile the careful driver reverses the engine, opens the cylinder cocks, and you think by the swish, swish of the escaping steam that there is an open switch just ahead; but you are always wrong. The truth is, they have no airbrakes, and the driver is obliged to hold the train with the engine in the back motion until it is brought down to a ressonable pace. When you have nearly stopped you go ahead again, just as you did before, and go on repeating the performance to the bottom of the hill, twenty-five miles and 2000 feet below Jerusalem. The balance of the journey over the Plain of Sharon is less hazardous. The engine-driver is a Frenchman, and extremely careful and competent. He never allowed the train to get beyond his control for a single moment, and he has, on the whole, about as difficult a run as there is east of Pike's Peak.

At Jaffa, as at Constantinople, you must take to the sea again, for there are no more railroads here.

STORM-BOUND AT JAFFA.

When we arrived at Jaffa we found the told that no ship had been able to land for three days. For nearly a mile from shore the sea was white with foam and yellow with sand. The wild billows came tearing through the rocks that stand out in the sea, broke on the walls of the houses and leaped to the tops. Far up the beach the waves ran high on the drifted aand, and the wind, blowing hard from the African coast, pulled off great fleeces of foam that went out over the desert and flecked the sides of passing camels. And when the sea ran back again it showed in the swirts the grinning skeletons of lost ships that had been driven there and wrecked on the reefs.

Every day we could see a passing steamer rolling and pitching eight or ten miles from shore. At the end of an hour or two she would steam away and leave us. This was the third day, they said, and the sea would surely go down that night—but it didn't. Then it looked like rain, and Prof. Hardegg, the manager of Hotel Jerusalem, said if it rained, the sea would surely subside, and we hoped again. The next day it rained. It continued to rain almost without ceasing for forty-eight hours.

One evening, I called on my friends, the English officers, at the Hotel Jerusalem, to learn the latest prophecy. There were easy of these officers stranded here, for their ship had parted her cable, left her anchor and gene to sea. The good old Hardegg eaid: "The sea will go down toright, for it is the sixth day, which is the limit." On the strength of this, some one ordered a bottle of brandy. In a little while young Hardegg, a youth of 14 or 15 springs, came in with a number of pamphlets. We each took a copy and found they were "Bibl: Pills, by Silas Hardegg." "Bible Pills" consisted of brief texts from the Testsment, and short sermons from Hardegs. They were a hard dose of pills, but of course I was not compelled to take them—I was only a caller, but the poor Englishmen had them three times a day and on going to bad.

Presently the boy looked in again, and eatid: "Pather cays you can have just one more bottle, and got another drop."

But one taste of the first bottle had ended in our taking the pledge, so this geatle hint was lost.

"George Henry," the professor had said when I called that evening, "take the gentleman up to Martha." I followed the boy away, musing the while and trying to reason out who Marrha was, and why I was going to her room. Yes, there was her name in white porcelain letters on her door. The boy knocked gently, and my heart beat wildly. To avoid starting into the hidy's room, I turned away, and eaw "Javob" on the door just opposite Marthe's. Then I looked along down the narrow hallway, and read on the other doors." "Patellipus" and "Paul."

Islam, just at the Sultan's power shall pass away when the last sacred dog dies. Looking down the conyon you see the old King's Garden, the pool of Siloam, the Virgia's well, and farther down some poor house where the lepers live. Still farther, fourteen miles away, and 4000 feet below you, lies the deep Dead Sea, beyond which are the hills of Moab. If you have been lucky enough to come up here without a guide, or dragoman, with a besom full of ivory-handled revolvers and long knives, you will sit for hours epellbound. Like the Catholic church, the guide tries too hard It was Friday morning when a ship from Egypt landed her passengers, and, although she was going to Bierout, where we had been and where we did not want to go, we took passage, saying, like Byron, that we cared not what land she bore us to save not again to Jaffa.

When Gordon Pasha discovered the place of the skull and set up a new Calvary, there was a commotion; but when Biss gets through! what a time they will have collecting their historic "places." AN ADMIRAL.

On the following Monday, just ten days from the day we came down from Jerusalem, we anchored again near the rock of Andromeda. The sea was smoother now. The battleship was fishing for her anchor, found it, and just after dark whistled and steamed away for Malta. From the deck of our steamer I watched her away and felt that I had six true friends, new-made but lasting, in her crew. And I thought how hard it would be for me to shoot her up and send her to the bottom of the sea with all those joily good fellows aboard; which I should surely do if we had a war and I were an admiral. Then I remembered how, one night at midnight, in a company composed of almost every nationality, when the Russian Vice-Consul, looking at me, the only American, raised his glass and said: "Monsieur I Americain," how these six English officers stood up and all at once, with one accord, and as lustily as they had sung "Tommy Atkins" sang "Hail Celumbia, Happy Land," and I rejoiced that I was not an admiral.

She was far at sea now, the lights were growing dimmer. Suddenly the search-light was turned on and shot a streak across the sea which seemed to reach to Europe. Then changing quickly she swept the waves toward Egypt till you fancied you could see the pyramids; and swinging round the great glare came down the coist and found Jaffa, and from our ship, a mile from shore, we could read the signa and count the window-panes and see the sash. Another move and the light rested on our ship, and in the glare I raised my cap and wondered if they could see us. Then as suddenly as it came the light was gone, the battleship sped on her way, and, hoisting anchor, we steemed away to Port Said—to Egypt.

SAN DIEGO, May 9.—(Special Correspondence.) Edgar A. Dreyfus has been in this city sometime selling second-hand typewriters. He is a smooth spoken young man. His peculiar doings deserve publication in order that business people of Southern California may know of his pushing me by them. I started to run, for never had the voice of man thrilled and filled me with such fear; but remembering my photographic machine, I had the guide throw them some coin and made a picture, but not a good one. I was surprised that the poor beggar near whose feet the money fell, made no effort to pick it up, but continued to pray to us, and waited for her companion. Then I saw that there were no fingers on her hands.

Another thing that surprises cone is that the moment you have seen it all, Jerusalem becomes to you the most melancholy locality on the face of the earth. It was so with us, I know, and when the time came to leave not one of our party missed the train.

The Turks are still on guard at the cradle and the grave of Christ to try and keep the devout Christians from spattering up the walls with each other's blood. The lamps have been carefully and nearly equally divided between the Greeks, Catholics and Armenians, as wel las the space around, and the time for worship. It was Sunday when we entered the church of the Holy Sepuchre. The Catholics had first place in the roundsfor they do not worship in one place—followed closely by the Armenians. These were mostly women and children, and they seemed frightnend when the others came up behind them. Behind the Armenians were the Greeks, led by a large, darkbearded man, who looked as fierce as a sea pirate. The Greek battalion were mostly men, and they seemed more bent on overtaking the others than on worshiping. Their leader came so changed much since. The Turks are still

White City, I often find myself lingering fovingly in a certain corner, perhaps the least "improved" spot in that blossoming White City, I often find myself ingering fovingly in a certain corner, perhaps the least "improved" spot in that blossoming wilderness, where the waters of the largoon flowed rather sluggiship beneath the straggling willow trees, and where the Esquimau, in the coolest of white cotton garments, pushed his light craft though the lampid shadows. Here arose the towers of a structure, more associated, perhaps, than any other in that fannous park with the primative architectural history of America—the State building of Calbornia, which reproduced so faishfully the character of those early mission churches erected by the Spanish padres and their Indian converts in our far southwestern land.

The peaceful idyl enacted here year by year gives place during a few brief days in the spring to a stirring romance, when the knight of old reappears in armor woven of leaves and blossoms, and, with arrows winged with flowers, again strives in the war of the roses, or in the tilt and tournament, to win the banner which he longs to lay at the feet of the "lady faire," who flings his colors to the breeze from the tribunes, or perhaps rides in state in his triumphal car. On the occasion of this fiesta the whole county is given over to merry-making, and the entire town transformed into a stage for the floral pagant.

Between Santa Barbara and the mountains opens the valley of Montecito, whose big grape vine rivals that of Hampion Court, and from whose ranches the vision travels past orange groves and forests of liveoaks to the shining etretches of the beach. Santa Barbara's Recent Brilliant and Successful Rose Show.

Successful Rose Show.

Santa Barbara's Flower Festival of 1895 has passed into the history of this charming seaside city, as well as into the history of the Coast, besides gaining much just fame abroad. It was a chaste, beautiful, successful and altogether unique affair.

FORESTERS' FLOAT.

Santa Barbara tandem cart covered with the wild brodaea, whose delicate tint, clossly resembling that of Parma viclets, was carried out in the harness and accessories. The same wild flower was massed on one of the most characteristic "four-in-hands"—a Spadish farm wagon to which were attached four white mules with purple nettings hanging down their sides.

were attached four white mules with purple nettings hanging down their sides.

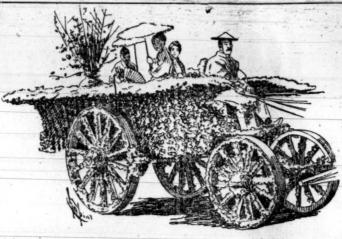

The old days of Spain were brought to mind by the bolero jackets and Spanish headdress of the merry party inside, who, with guitar and tambourine, added to the gay abandon of the scene. A glowing bit of color was furnished by the seventy thousand orange calendulas, used to decorate a royal surrey, on whose canopled back, like one of King Ludwig's siedges, perched an eagle, holding yellow ribbons attached to the black horses. As a dainty contrast came a hittle carriage all white and pink, itself looking like a huge marguerite. Five white horses with collars of pink roses were guided by pink reins, held by as many outriders.

The trades were represented by designs of great ingenuity and sometimes beauty as well. The honors in this line were rightfully won by a tea merchant, who exhibited a Chinese pagoda, drawn by six chestnut horses. A tea party was in progress in this vehicle, which was transformed into an Oriental bower by peach and cherry blossoms, under which ladies of the Flowery Kingdom sipped their tea. With flowers flying through the air, flowers lying under foot, flowers covering four when and bridge, are there any left to come? A cavalcade of borsemen

Those who have witnessed "flower carni vals" (a misnomer, by the way,) under the blue skies along the shores of the Mediterranean, at Nice, Rome and Madrid, say that Santa Barbara's display surpassed them all. Of the seventy-five or more ve-hicles and floats in the parade there was not one unworthy of artistic merit.

In conjunction with the handsome sketch reproduced from Once a Week, in today's Times, a further brief review of the striking features of the festival will be in or-der, notwithstanding the accounts pub-lished during its progress. THE PRINCIPAL FLOATS.

The important floats were six in num ber, unique and novel in conception. The sailors' float was a miniature design in marguerites, roae buds, red geraniums, yellow marguerites and black pansies, of the United States man-of-war Olympia, then in the harbor. This float was fiteen fest long and ten feet wide, raised to a height of four feet. The miniature Olympia rested on bodia used to simulate waves, white marguerites representing the whitecapa. The hull was of white rose buds, while black pansies represented the smokestacks, red geraniums the portholes and yellow marguerites the canvas. An American flag and the Union Jack in red, white and blue silk completed the design. The Flower Festival float was in representation of a Japanese pagoda and was a conception in nasturtiums and boughs of the Judas tree. A number of children in ber, unique and novel in conception. arrives on the scene—Robin Hood and his merry men, with Friar Tuck, an Indian, a hermit and a cavalier whose exitume is white, including his silver-trimmed sombrero, and whose saddle-cloth is one mass of creamy carnations, as is his sorrel's shield-shaped collar. Cupid on a bleyde follows two wheels joined together as a yack under sail, and the procession of flowers is closed with the miniature goat procession of sold and sold with the miniature goat procession of sold and sold with the miniature goat procession of sold and sold with the miniature goat of the land of the "Rising Sun" were prettily grouped about the pagoda. The "Relina de Los Flores" float in the procession, and was the idea of A. M. Ruiz. It represented the Queen of Flowers reclining in Grecian shell, drawn by two white marguerites, guided by Measirs. Bartley, Treg and Mower, as currently are prettily grouped about the pagoda.

A gondola of white roses, trimmed with red roses, was the design presented for admiration by the High-school football team. The body of the float was covered with time flowers, wild lupine decorating the sides and wisteria ornamenting the surface—the latter intended to represent water. The gondollers were Peveril Meigs and F. Birtch, who wore, white suits with sashes and turbans of red.

Among the vehicles in line none attracted more attention than the tally-ho driven by Mr. Low of the Commercial Hotel. The coach was one mass of calla lilles trimmed with yellow and white ribbons. Baby Low presented a pretty effect as she peeped out from the illies, the idea being to have her represent the pistil of a calla.

One of the prettiest and quaintest ideas seen in the procession was a representation of "Marguerite and Her Lover." Two chairs decorated with white marguerites were attached to either sides of the black horse, and in one, all in white, her straw hat dotted with marguerites, sat Miss Kittredge, while the lover, Maurice Kittredge, in a costume of yellow and blue, white wig and jaunty hat with flowing white feathers, attended the couple as footpan.

A cotte flea was a ministure new on with paim leaves.

Besides these arches the streets were crossed and recrossed with lines of gally-colored banners, and the entire street was lined on both sides with palm leaves. The dark green was a striking and pleasing contrast to the different tinted flowers and gaudy-colored streamers. State street appeared a veritable Garden of Eden, and many a beautiful Eve graced its confines during the flower festival.

The superb floral parade was so kaleidoscopic, so varied and so beautiful in all Redetails as to tax the powers of description. Those who witnessed the pageant as fit came up State etreet will long bear it in the recesses of their memory.

Within the nest were Paula Wright, the Dean children and little Miss Thayer. Miss Constance Delainey and Mies Mabel Nixon, attired in classic Roman costumes of yellow, appeared in a chartot lavishly ornamented with yellow marguerites, and accompanied by three Nublan slaves. Three beautiful cream-culored eleeds drew the turnout.

One of the most beautifully-decorated of the vehicles was the surrey of Mrs. Richard Hall. The carriage was simply a mass of pink carnations. Four handsome horses in pink settin ribbon-trimmed harness drew the conveyance, while four outriders in Spanish costume attended the fair driver, Miss Sarah Boyce.

An English dog-ourt, trimmed completely with La Marque roses, and driven by the Misses Nettle Coles, Myride Lloyd and Ruby Garland, was an unique feature of the procession.

A phaeton of Duchess roses, occupied by Mrs. Tapley and Miss Kingsley, was a very striking object in the procession.

There was a phaeton beautifully decorated with sweet peas, and phaetons in marrigold and in roses. So carefully and thickly were the flowers attached that the woodwork of the vehicles was hidden from view.

The wealth of the flower kingdom was ransacked to turnish flowers for the many phaetons, carts, coaches and hacks that expeared in the procession. The floral parade resembled more a moving garder than the mere decoration of floats and vehicles. Never before was seen such a lavish use of flowers. Twenty thousand roses in a single float; 25,000 calla Hiles in a single decoration!

gle float; 25,000 calls lilles in a single decoration!

As the procession passed the tribunes for the second time, the signal was given for the second time, the signal was given for the second time, the signal was given for the war of the roses, and soon the air was filled with a cloud of flowers. It would be impossible to number the myriads of flowers that were tossed from friend to friend during this beautiful war. Roses, marguerites, lilles and other flowers fell thick and fast upon the participants. And notwithstanding the countless thousands of flowers used in this pageant, the gardens of the valleys and the hills of Santa Barbara are teeming with nature's beauties, and no void greets the eye in this wondrous fertile section.

Only in Southern California can such scenes be witnessed, and only here is such productiveness known.

State street for nearly its entire length was a floral vieta, and the beautiful thoroughare was decorated with arches, palms, pampas plumes and flowers. The first arch to attract the attention of the incoming visitor was at Haley street. This arch was heavily covered with green cypress bordered with pilk pampas plumes and a drapery of pilk roses with an edging of tree moss. One block away was another arch decorated with pilk pampas plumes and the rarch decorated with pilk pampas plumes and the rarch decorated with pilk pampas plumes and the rarch decorated with pilk pampas plumes in the next in regular sequence was a master arch decorated with pilk pampas plumes.

ing of tree moss. One block away was another arch decorated with palms and white illies.

The next in regular sequence was a massive triumphal arch, built upon eight pillars, with three passage ways through the structure, whose dimensions measured sixty-five feet in length and twenty feet in width. This arch was constructed as a compliment to the navy, the United States steamship Olympia being in the harbor. The arch was decorated with colored pampas plumes, so as to simulate the national colors, two large American flags of tinted plumes forming an important feature of the decoration. In order that night might not dull the beauty of this structure, electric lights were placed within the central span, and, illuminated, presented a grand effect.

A fourth arch was ornamented with the

By the way, Joy's is very popular now. I hear the boys in the street sho ing Joy's for the jaded. I see col umns and columns of testimonials in the various papers of the country. It is certainly a great remedy and if any one desires to call at 320 California street I shall be pleased to tell them what good has been ac complished by the home remedy, Joy's Vegetable Sareaparilla.

What Mr. French says is absolutely so Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla has touched the hearts of the people because it is the remedy Blood Diseases, Dyspepsia, Loss of Sleep, Chronic Constipation, Birlousness and many forms of LIVER DISORDERS.

a ducking, but which, nevertheless, look strongly suggestive of only high and dry on the sand.

FOR BEACH PARADE. For, if some maids look upon courting the salt sea wave as the summit of human bliss, there are others of the sex we know who prefer the courting of man; and for these last a bathing costume affords golden and legitimate opportunities. With old Papa Neptune as chaperone, trim ankles

SHOWY FRENCH FABRICS.

A yellow mohair costume, just imported from Doucet, has the unique distinction of a trimming of yellow embroidery. The silk, which is four inches wide, is scalloped and worked in raised knots and is gathered in frilis to edge the large sallor collar, the bottom of the short puffed sleeves and those of the bloomer drawers. Another that is to take its "header" at Trouville this summer—or more probably its nigs dry bath on the sands—is of Nile green satin with trimmings of white silk braid, wide and narrow.

Black satin, with a vast sailor collar and skirt hem six inches deep of scarlet satin is yet another Parisian symphony for the sea. In the corners of the flaming collar are worked big anchors in black; and with this costume scarlet stockings will be worn, and on the head a scarlet silk handkerchief that ties in a knot in front with ass-car ends.

As to these head handkerchiefs and all the other implements that go with bathing clothes: The handkerchiefs are more chic and becoming than the cil-skin caps so long in favor. They are no protection to the hair of course, but then the caps are no great protection, either (besides being ugly, which is a crime,) and with the head crowned with a brilliant bit of color, a shabby bathing suit may be made to do duty indefinitely.

The most bearable of the handkeychiefs are in solid tints—red, blue, yellsw and black—but there are also some with plain centers and striped borders, and very dashing ones in great gaudy plaids.

CLOTHING THE FEET.

Stockings are in solid tints, or are else divided with a sock effect into a light and dark section, which style, however, as well as brilliant colors, is only suited to the slimmest extremities. Ladies with what the circus clown humorously, but ungallantly, dubs "planny legs" (begging their pardon, of course) should stick religiously to black stockings. Three pairs can be had for $1, and if feet are tender, there are black Jersey stockings, with hard canvascovered soles, that sell at 75 cents the pair. Other bathing shoes, for certainly these soles take the place of shoes, are conspicuous by their absence. For going from bath-house to surf, any old slippers on hand may be called into service, though each of the imported suits described was provided with a little pair of sandalg that were to be fastened on with a cross-gartering of ribbons, are those in illustration. As can be seen, this cross-gartering is graceful additions to slight ankles; but it

Trimmings are white, red and blue braid, or the same material as the suit in a contrasting shade, and sleeves are short and most graceful when puffed. Occasionally, however, will be seen short, close sleeves, but fit as snugly as those of a jersey underdress, but it is well to remember that these are only suited to the most statuesque modelings.

FOR ALL SHAPES AND SIZES. Thin girls make more agreeable pictures in the puffed sleeves, and if arms are too meager there are other full sleeves that extend to the wrist, a snug elastic holding them in there with a full finish. Waists all have the effect of being worn with cor-

Much has been written about the chiffon girl, but has anyone reasoned out the history of her evolution?

The tailor-made girl is her direct ancestor, but the latter's inveterate habit of tippling at the soda water fountain has wrought the change.

The excessive amount of fizzy efforescence imbified for so many years has, like a long smouldering flame, burst the stiff bands of linen around neck and sleeves, conquered the molded lines and curves, and materialized itself in a bewildering mass of ruffle and fluft that has supplemented the severity of costume. Nothing but the soda drinks can be held responsible for the change. The soda water girl is so distilictly a product of the day that she should have careful consideration. How very different in character is she to the gentle maiden who clad herself in a dress of simple muslin, with blue or pink ribbons, twined a rose or a string of pearls in her ringlets, and sat with dignified and upright demeanor upon her grandmother's stiff mahogany chairs, sipping with the guests the "raspherry vinegar" or "currant shrub," served in crystal glass, beautifully cut and polished, and against which the ice tinkled with suppressed merriment. Those were days of dignity and reserve. It is very much pleasanter and far more exciting for the modern Rebecca to go with Isaac to the well and select her rapidly executed drinks and let him pay for them.

becca to go with Isaac to the well and select her rapidly executed drinks and let him pay for them.

The summer girl is more farsighted than the winter sister, who very often complains of the lack of attention from her admirers; but the tickets to the theater and opera are expensive, and so are winter flowers, and so are nice little suppers or dinners or breakfasts a deux; and homage to beauty leaps beyond the average purse and out of the average affection of the average gallant when the thermometer drops bu. The summer bravery for the conquest is less difficult to obtain and less harrassing to arrange; and, this provided for, the rest is easy. All she requires is to have some one who "will pilot her empty heart unto the shores of nothing," and carry, this frail bark over boundless, limitless oceans of soda water. She is lying in ambush now for the young man with the broadbrimmed hat, decked with the striped band. He is sure to be a good subject, and she knows that when he is entrapped he is good for two treats on the same evening. The soda-water girl is of all things considerate, for, although she generally takes fifteen drinks, or glasses, a day, she never puts herself under obligations to one man for more than two within twenty-four hours.

These are nameless, but beautiful, pieces of ecclesiastical art, and before treating them with the oil and wax finish she touches the halos about saintly faces with very dull pale gilt, and with infinite good taste touched in a faint color about the folds of the garments. This was to imitate the faded thinings seen in old frescos. When the paint had dried on she lightly brushed over the whole cast one coat of burnt umber very much diluted with linseed oil, and when that had dried on, leaving the white plaster a pale ivory color she dipped a clean soft brush in the liquid wax, washed over the plaster once and then polished the surface with a fiannel rag.

There is no doubt that Paul M. Potter's dramadization of "Trefty" has proved the greatest popular success New York has seen since the days of "The Two Orphans." It was a lucky strike for Manager A. M. Pabmer. His stock company was a thing of the past, and there was little definite for him in the immediate future. But now he is unable to find a playbouse in New York sufficiently large to hold the crowds that fock to his doors.

The Parts Charivari suggests a novel means for doing away with the theater hat. "Why not." It says, "separate the audience as in a church, placing the men on one side and the women on the other?" The presumption is, of course, that when the women are obliged to choose between the separation of the sexes and the use of a less objectionable headdrees they will adopt the latter. Also, under such an arrangement, the chenter hat will annoy no one but the wearer of R. It seems that the legislatures overlooked the most efficient means of redress.

(Detroit Journal:) Soon another theatrical season will end. The At the Burbank Edgar Selden, the actor and playwright, has been delighting big audiences, and, commencing tonight, will appear in one of the funniest farce-comedies ever written, entitled "McKenna's Flirtation." Mr. Selden is an able actor a sweet singer and a graceful dancer. The The play, if play it can be called, as it was only written for strictly laughing purposes, is embellished with numerous new songs and dances, in which the young star should be able to display his talents admirably. The cast for the coming week will be a girong one, consisting of a few old favor-ites as well as numerous new candidates as well as numerous new candidates the favor of Angelenos. f Mr. Sølden and "McKenna's Flirtasaid:

"The Bush-street Theater was packed to the doors last night by an audience who laughed themselves hoarse at Edgar Selcen in "McKenna's Filtration." It is one of the most laughable skits ever put on the stage, and the introduced songs and dances, particularly those of Mr. Selden, received and merited great applause."

Commencing tomorrow night the uproarlously funny farce-comedy "Muldoon's Picnic," will be presented at the Orpheum in addition to the regular vaudeville performance. "Muldoon's Picnic" is about the only creation of its class which has been able to stand the test of time. It is a very droll and merry skit, one of the cleverest of Irish burlesqueries ever put upon the stage, and it holds the record for long runs, 600 nights in New York being the mark attained. The lines are jolly and upon the stage, and it holds the record for long runs, 500 nights in New York being the mark attained. The lines are joily and clever, and the situations afford no end of opportunities for fun in the hands of capable people. Tom Nawn and John Ray will appear as the two chums, Michael Muldoon and Michael Muldahy, and they may be relied upon to do ample justice to the opportunities. The play's author could not have desired two better comedians for these leading parts. Both are great in Irish character parts, though each differs from the other in method. The roles are not new to them, as they were similarly cast when Tony Pastor produced the plece at his New York theater.

A member of the Treble Clef Club writes to The Times, denouncing an unfair statement made by a weekly paper of this city regarding the affairs of the Treble Clef and EMs clubs, in which she says, "a most unkind, unjust and untrue statement was made regarding the leading musical clubs of this city. Where the enterprising sheet obtained its fund of information is a mystery, as most certainly any one in a position to know would hardly have dared to weave such a gauzy fabric of misrepresentation. The business affairs of the Ellis and Treble Clef clubs have always been kept entirely separate; that was, distinctly understood at the beginning, and was the expressed wish of each club. The concert work has been done in unison, and is largely under the management of a committee composed of two members of the Ellis Club and three of the Treble Clef Club. The expenses of the oncerts have been shared equally. Aside from actual concert work each club attends to its own affairs in its own way. The financial condition of the Treble Clef Club today is as good, if not better, than it was at the time the clubs decided to try the experiment of giving their concerts together. So far as the Treble Clef Club is concerned, the year's work has been much enjoyed and very satisfactory."

(Detroit Journal:) Soon another theatrical season will end. The summer vacation will be a boon to the usbers, who are worn and jaded as a result of their labors in leading the applause. They have worked assiduously and are entitled to a rest. The press agent for traveling shows has only a few more days in which to get rid of his advance notices so dimly printed on the typewriter that they couldn't be read even with the aid of a Lick telescope. There was an agent at the beginning of the season who started out to supply editors with copy printed in clear type with room enough between the lines for a street parade, but he was killed in a railroad accident and the jay who took his place wrote with red ink and on both sides of the paper. If he is ever killed it will be by the editor who has to rewrite his copy. While the theaters are closed there is a chance that the man who has seen the play before and tells his companion all about it in tones loud enough to be heard three rows away, will be drowned at a summer resort while behis ut it is more probable that he was keen a vacation, and the chances of the profession who contemplate with pleasure the approaching vacation."

AN ELECTRIC CAR ACCIDENT ON SECOND STREET.

A Little Colored Child Run Over and Severely Injured - Passengers Charge the Motorneer With Criminal Carelessness.

Little David Cunningham, a colored child about a year and a half old, was run over by a Second-street electric car about 7 o'clock last evening and severely injured. The wonder is that the little tot was not killed instantly. His smallness, apaprently, is all that saved his life, as him, except in three or four spots. The child's injuries consist of a crushed right foot, a cut lip and a scal wound, and if he recovers, which is probable, he wil be a cripple for life.

The accident occurred in front of the residence of the parents of the child, Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Cunningham, corner of Alameda and Second streets. The little boy had just been given his supper, and, unovserved by the other members of the household, ran out into the street. The mother, of the infant discovered his absence and ran out just'in time to see the distressing accident.

It was car No. 7, returning from La Grande Depot, that ran over the child. The motorman, No. 67, says he did not observe the little one in time to stop the car and prevent the accident. A passenger on the car, however, saw the child's danger and jumped off almost in time to enatch it away from in front of the wheels.

Several colored women in the vicinity who saw the accident say it could easily have been avoided if the motorman had been minding his business. The diraster occurred only twenty-five or thitry-five feet from the Alameda-street crossing of the Southern Pacific Railroad, where all cars are required to stop. In view of this, it is claimed, the car should have been going slow enough to be stopped instantly. It is also contended that there was no proper fenders on the car.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Preparations for the Banquet-Some Exhibition Notes.

The menu-cards for the Chamber of Commerce banquet promise to be things of beauty. Elmer Wachtel is deep in the evolving of striking and original designs for the artistic part of it, and Secretary Willard goes about with a harrassed wrinkle between his brows, the result of long and anxious cogitation of appropriate sentiments. Christopher is the caterer, and he has evolved a bill of fare to tempt the gods, and Superintentient Wiggins and his assistants are performing feats of his assistants are performing feats of grand and lofty tumbling in arranging the effective decorations of the great hall. About two hundred guests are expected to surround the festive board, and much "feast or reason and flow of soul" is promised, in addition to the more substantial viands.

THE "COIN" DISCUSSION.

Horace White's dissection of that muchquoted and greatly-overrated book known as "Coin's Financial School" is clear-cut and merclless. The second installment of White's article is published in The Times this morning, and the conclusion will be given tomorrow. A brief summary of the chief points made in the matter

Mr. White makes it clear that this country alone is not able to make sixteen ounces of eilver equal to one in gold when the whole world is offering thirtytwo ounces of silver for one of gold.

Therefore, the practical results of 16-to-1 free and unlimited colnage must necessar be silver monometallism.

"Coin's" statements as to the amount of money in circulation in the fifteenth century, and the price of wheat, are clearly shown to be both false and sophistical. Me White also brings out the important point that at the dawn of the Christian era, when "Coin" claims that money was plenty and times were flush, men's wages were one penny per day. He shows, further, that in feudal times the price of was more dependent upon the caprices of feudal lords than upon the law of supply and demand, hence quotatio of prices for that period are unreliable and prove nothing.

Mr. White clearly convicts "Coin" of ting from public documents, misstating dates, and twisting facts out of all semblance to the truth. "Coin" will no doubt be glad to have their attention called to these discrep-ancies, if they are in search of the truth.

"Coin's" statement that the silver dol lar was the unit of value in this country White quotes from the coinage law of 1792, verbatim, and conclusively proves that the word "unit," as used in the law, meant a unit of number, rather than of The law of 1792 established the relative quantities of either gold or silver that should be used in the gold and the silver coins respectively. A ten-dol-lar gold-piece contained ten units of gold, weight, and a silver dollar contained one unit of eilver. The number of grains of silver in a dollar was determined by the price which the Spanish-milled dollar, as then current, would bring in gold. The American eliver dollar of 3711/2 grains never got into circulation at home, to any extent, and its coinage was stopped in 1805 not to be resumed until 1836, after which only a very small number were

"Coin's" statement that all foreign silver coins had been made legal tender in country prior to 1860 is also shown to be false and misleading by a quotation of the full section of the law which "Coin" being to mislead the reader. The fact is that Congress made only two foreign piece and the Spanish dollar. They were made because they were in general circulation in the American colonies before the latter achieved their independence. Mr. White also convicts "Coin" of several gross discrepancies and anachronisms in above connection, and in regard to the change of ratio from 15 to 1 to 16 to 1.

The sophistries of "Coin" are pierced through and through with the keen shaft of truth. To "Coin's" claim that silver "the poor man's money," Mr. White replies that the poor man is entitled to as

Mr. White analyzes the so-called "crime of 1873," and shows that there was no "secrecy," as is alleged by "Coin," in the legislation of that year relative to the inges made in the coinage laws. On contrary, the discussion ran through 144 columns of the Congressional Globe. while the bill was printed thirteen times session. Its provisions were clearly understood and appreciated at the time of its passage, and there was no secrecy and no "crime" about the matter.

The reader may follow in detail the remaining points of Mr. White's dissection and at every turn he will discover that the advocate of dishonest dollars is floored by the veteran editor in a manner both scientific and effectual. Mr White's article is likely to throw camp of the silver monometallists into mending the very steps which the Chlnese defeats have since shown to be necessary. Thereupon, the young Emperor, who had never been permitted to gain any inkling of the true state of affairs, took Li Hung Chang into full confidence again, restored his decorations, gave him abso-lute authority in negotiating with Japan,

The Viceroy's son says that not only his father, but all the manderins and other officials who are in the Viceroy's suite, are committed to the policy of progress in the broadest material sense. It is the Viceroy's intention to place China on a level with other great nations of the world, not only in the art of war, but also in peaceful industries. The army and may will be reorganized on modern meth-ods, railroads and telegraphs will be built and manufactories of all kinds established. This, for a time, will undoubtedly lead to a greatly-increased demand for American products, but it must be remembere that the Chinese, under proper instruction, have proved themselves to be wonderfully chrewd in rapidly imitating the best imported machinery, 23 Mr. Carpenter has graphically shown in the letters which have been published from week to week in The Times. Then, again, Japan, which has rapidly come to the front during the past few years in the line of manufacturing, will prove an active competitor of the United States and Europe in supply ing the long-unfeit wants of the Chinese. As we remarked recently, in comment ing upon this same subject, the whole world may well look with deep interest not unmixed with anxiety, on the awaker ing of this giant power, which has slept, not only for centuries, but for thousands of years, oblivious to what has been going on around it. We have seen what Japan has been able to accomplish within a few years. What may be expected from a country, the population of which is ten times as great as that of Japan, when that country makes up its mind to adopt modern methods and take its place among the nations of the earth? Not only will their competition be severely felt in every but in case they should ever make up their minds to enter upon an aggressive policy the world might witness a protracted period of conquests and slaughter such as in this not eeen since the days of Alexander the Great. It has been claimed that the Chinese are cowardly in their nature, and do not take kindly to the pursuit of war. It is true that not only in the recent war, but in previous engagements, the Japanese have almost invariably come off the victors, but this is not etrange when we observe the rotten methods of thos who are placed in command of the military and naval affairs of the empire, methods which have been in force for centuries if not for thousands of years. Another thing to be remembered is that in China the military classes are looked down upon but this is likely to be entirely changed under the new state of affairs, which will prevail if Viceroy Li continues in power Yet another fact that is someth eight of is, that among the hundreds of millions of souls which go to make up the population of China, there may found races showing as great difference character as those which distinguish the various peoples of Europe from one another, or which distinguish the mild Hindoo of the plains from the martial Sikhe and Ghoorkas of Northern Hindostan, than whom there are no better fighters in the British army. It looks as if one of the greatest socia problems that has agitated this little the closing years of the present century within the boundaries of the "Flowery

His English birth is a patent of nobility. His concernpt for what is not English is as unaffected as it is profound. His spirit everywhere is the spirit that his government is manifesting in Nicaragua. I am not speaking of the English gentleman, but of the typical Britisher, who cutnumbers the other as illbred men outnumbers the other as illbred men outnumber the well-bred in every kand. It is the typical Britisher who is a grain of sand in the American as in most other eyes. He is loathed on the continent of Europe as deeply as he is over here. The nearest American sprocach to him is the Southern gentleman, who is not a gentleman at home in the South, but who when away from where he is known models himself on what he fancies a great planter should be; and in his view the chief supports of the dignity of that character are to take the name of his Maker in vain, and drink frequently. The English satirists from Thackeray to Gilbert have been powerless to abate the Britisher who goes on his travels and offends mankind with the conviction that it is greatly to his credit that in spite of all temptations to belong to other nations he remains an Englishman. He needs a drubbing, and Americans cherish the hope and faith that It is freserved for the United States to edminister it. The hostility is traditional. marks in regard to the probable effect, which the victory of Japan over China, and the modernizing of Japan, which was likely to follow that victory, would have upon the world at large. At that time there appeared to be no prospect of a change in the Chinese programme, other than such as might be brought about by Japanese influence. According to this interview with the son of the great Viceroy, it is, however, altogether probable that China herself will take the initiative, come out of her sleep of centuries, and assume the place in the world to which the viceroy's enemies managed to bring him into disfavor with the Emperor, and how, when he obtained an audience with the Viceroy's enemies managed to bring him into disfavor with the Emperor, and how, when he obtained an audience with the Viceroy's enemies managed to bring him into disfavor with the Emperor, and how, when he obtained an audience with the Viceroy's enemies managed to bring him into disfavor with the Emperor, and how, when he obtained an audience with the Viceroy's enemies managed to bring him into disfavor with the Emperor, and how, when he obtained an audience with the Wiceroy's enemies managed to bring him into disfavor with the Emperor, and how, when he obtained an audience with the Wiceroy's enemies managed to bring him into disfavor with the Emperor, and how, when he obtained an audience with the Wiceroy's enemies managed to bring him into disfavor with the Emperor, and how, when he obtained an audience with the Wiceroy's enemies managed to bring him into disfavor with the Emperor, and how, when he obtained an audience with the Wiceroy's enemies managed to bring him into disfavor with the Emperor, and how, when he obtained an audience with the Wiceroy's enemies managed to bring him into disfavor with the Emperor, and how, when he obtained an audience with the Wiceroy's enemies managed to bring him into disfavor with the Emperor, and how, when he obtained an audience with the Wiceroy's enemies managed to bring him into disfavor with the Empero

English speech and English dress, in do-ing which they make themselves ridiculous, ing which they make themselves ridiculous, not only to their own countrymen, but to visiting Bogdishmen. Then, again, why cannot we try to make it unfashionable for wealthy American girls to throw themselves and their money away on worthless members of the British aristocracy, who frequently have no standing in their own country among respectable people? Yet, again, why cannot we induce wealthy Americans to occasionally take a trip ofer their own great country, instead of always running over to England and the

their own great country, instead of always running over to England and the continent for their outings?

As long as Americans slavishly imitate the Britishers in their dress, and speech and manners; as long as American girls turn up their noses at plain American men and throw themselves at the feet of worthless stilled scoundress; as long as Americans with for the hones of heirs presented at fight for the honor of being presented at court as if it were an honor greater than can be had in this country; as long as wealthy Americans expatriate themselves and even seek to acquire British titles with the money which they have made in their native cand, it is not surprising that Bogtishmen read with encredulky the oriticisms of Great Britain that appear and believe that the emanate from a small coteste of Irish-Americans.

It would be better if we had a bess spread-magic denunciation of John Bull, and a little more sturdy assumption of old-fashioned, thorough-going Americanism, without any frills on it.

The Sewer Committee did well in deciding that no further city contracts shall be awarded to contractors who have not done good work until they have paid the expense of making the necessary re-pairs. A bid was recently submitted for the Maple-avenue sewer, and it was found that the lowest bid came from Frick Bros., the firm which had done the poor work on the Hollenbeck Park sewer. The Sewer Committee adopted a resolution to the effect that no contracts shall hereafter be awarded to Frick Bros. until they indemnify the city for its extra expenditure on the Hollenbeck sewer. The city has already spent over $400 on this job, and it has now been discovered that further repairs, which are needed will cost more than was at first supposed, so that it is quite likely that the loss to the city through the bad work of these contractors will amount to nearly, if not quite, the sum of $2000, which was erroneously men-clomed in The Times as the amount appropriated by the Council for the repairs.

A correspondent writes to The Tin say that it seems to him that "if the United States were able to make green-backs equal to gold without international conference, it ought to be able to make a silver dollar worth a dollar." The esteemed correspondent is reminded that the United States government was not able to make greenbacks equal to gold until some fourteen years after the close of the war. It could never have made them equal to gold had not the volume of greenbacks been definitely limited by law. This government cannot, alone, make a 50-cent silver dollar worth a dollar in gold, ex cept by limiting the amount of such silver dollars outstanding Hence unlimited coinage of the cheaper dollar would be scarcely less disastrous than an unlimited issue of paper money.

The Chicago Tribune says that the fre Altgeld, and wish he would go out. At first they thought he would be a valuable ally, because, being a German, he might bring some Germans with him. But he brought no more recruits to the free-silver camp than Benedict Arnold did to that of Clinton. But the did bring with him his obnoxious and repellant Anarchist record." The latter is enough to condemn to defeat flicts itself.

A number of letters on both sides of the money question have already been received by The Times; they will receive attention in due course. It is a good time to remind correspondents that brevity is largely essential to securing publication of their let-ters; they should also bear in mind that frequently, if not always, better points can be made in a quarter or half a column than in half a page.

Great Britain carries $112,000,000 of sub sidiary silver coins, or nearly as much silver as paper currency. In the United States there is legal-tender silver currency ount of $549,700,000.

Clean, Comfortable and Well-governed Culiacan and Its Industries.

Justice is Swift and Sure—The Way Business is Conducted—Courtships and Heart-smashing in Mexico.

CULIACAN (Mex.,) May 1.—(Species Correspondence.) Cities partake of the characteristics of their inhabitants. In Culiacan tis citizens wash their necks and ears and hands and faces and feet before retiring, and in the morning take a bath. The city is abreast with its citizens. Its streets are paved with cobblestones, the property owners adjacent thereto are compelled by law to sprinkle and sweep to the center of the etreet morning and evening, or pay fine of 50 cents a house, the fine increasing with the second and subsequent of fensees. Culiacan is the cleanest city I have yet seen in Mexico. Early and late city carts cart away the sweepings. Waterworks and a sewerage system are part and parcel of Culiacan. Its business houses are of aubstantial brick, plastered on the establishment of their public schools they have patterned after "the States," meaning by this always the United States. In the lower grades of the public schools they have patterned after "the States," meaning by this always the United States. In the lower grades of the public schools the publis study their lessons aloud. If the voice of mother's precious little bridge is not heard, inquiry will be made as to the cause why birdle does not articutate. Then they have their law school, and their business college, where the rights that the human race acquitite under diverse circumstances are dwelt und upon, and the ways and means of making record of human transactions are explained briefly as well as in full. Here, too, is our new theater, capacity, 1500. Music? He smiles. Were he a citizen record of human transactions are explained briefly as well as in full. Here, too, is our new theater, capacity, 1500.

Music? He smiles. Were he a citizen of Harrison county, in the State of Indiana, his reply would have been, "Well, I should smile!" The city supports twenty-two brass musical instruments, with persons who have contracted to harmonizingly blow the same three evenings of every week at, in or about the artistic stand erected in the center of the plaza, where the public gather and promenade upon the serpentine walks among the tropical trees and flowers, or without fear tramp or roli upon the grass, and listen to modulated sounds in concert that are repeated in the heart. Music in general is reciprocated by music in particular; there are eighty planos in this little city upon which the senoritas play as sweetly as they look.

which the senoritas play as sweetly as they look. Our cotton mill here has 2064 fooms, and consumes 120 tons of Texas cotton a year. I met an American here who has resided for fifteen years in Mexico. He advocates Mexico, and eays that large profits may be realized on investments all through the country. When he learned that facts were in request, he braced himself, feet well apart, extended his left hand and pointed to the palm with his right-hand digit finger, as if to indicate that the facts were contained in his left hand, and elevating and depreseing his mustaches in an impressive manner, proceeded to remark:

"No strikes in Mexico. No combinations of capital. Artificial does not count here. We go natural. Supply and demand governs here. It's we give so much. If Francisco Don Al Var Kas de Riercenie does not work to suit, we fire him and hire another, and there is nothing to arbitrate. The manufacturer who invests his another, and there is nothing to arbitrate. The manufacturer who invests his money in this country is permitted to attend to his own business, and is not surprised at seeing other people attending to theirs. The way to invest is to associate yourself with a Mexican, examine his books, see for yourself what the profits are, and whether they are susceptible of increase. If it figures right, buy in, secure yourself by safe collaterals, and then attend to your own business. Twenty-five and 30 per cent. is getting here." I inquired.

am 39 per cent. is getting here." I inquired.

"Beautifully! Justice is swift. For instance, two weeks ago, here in Culiacan, a Mexican murdered his mistrees—got jealous and stabbed her to death. He was arrested, tried, convicted, sentenced and taken out and shot within forty-eight hours. That, you see, is business. It's while the facts are fresh, and before time has been allowed to obscure crime with doubts—the clouds that emanate from defective memories; before the insanity dodge had been suggested by able counsel, before the criminal thought to inquire: What have I been doing this day or two? I feel so curfous in my head and about my eyes, and such a roaring in my cars!" Near Pueblo, recently, a diligence was attacked by five men and robbed. No one was hirt." A squad of State troops were sent in pursuk. The robbers were overtaken. The squad returned, and reported 'no cause for arrest. We all know what that means. They showed fight, and were all killed."

"Yes, that's what we call tynch law," I remarked, "a life for the crime, without being particular as to who pays the pensity."

remarked, "a life for the crime, without being particular as to who pays the penalty."

"Don't you think it. It's a restraining act. If Guiteau had had Mexican law applied instead of the infliction upon the world of that disgraceful period of doubt Carter Harrison would be alive today. We here are in the advance. About the killing for the first offense our foremost minds are in doubt. These criminals are raised to it. Crime is in their blood. It is mainly inherited. The records put this fact outside of question. The father or the mother of a thief was a thief, or ever the granifather or grandmother was a thief. The same is true of the murderer. The farmer who owns a vicious horse, or long, or cow, knows how to improve his stock. The humane thrust, or slash of a knife, as the case may be, may save his life; upon the instant change the disposition of the animal, and forever obstruct the transmission of those hated traits to their posterity, and insure greater security to his posterity.

"Society has learned to read and write, and some can spell correctly. Does it learn no lesson from this? The surgeon's knife is the most potent wapon for the removal of deep disease, and the skill acquired by practice, and knowledge of anatomy, is marvelous. A pug nose may be brought to the Roman or the aquilitie at whim, diseased brein removed and skull pplied, or intestines patched, as case julies. Lynch law is an improvement the law's desay, but I can in favor of surgeon's knife and improved poster-

THE INFORMATION.

"The social laws of this country are strict. Courtships are carried on under the old Spanish customs. The lady who disregards them is subject to serious censure. Before a lady becomes engaged she is never permitted to be alone with her admirer. That would be dreadful. The mother or some member of the family must be present. Should the gentleman invite his love out to the theater, for instance, the invitation is extended to the family, and it is not unusual that they all attend."

"At his expense?"
"Cortainly."
"And should it be a carriage ride to observe some lofty peak, that, parting the clouds"—
"The rule applies." "The social laws of this country are serve some lofty peak, that, parting the clouds"—

"The rule applies."
"And you think it right?"
"No; I do not think it best; but it is the universal rule, and it would be wrong to break it. But if I could, I would oppose it. I think the lady and the gentleman should have opportunity to study each other's character more closely than is possible within the sight and hearing of others, and that it would result in more congenial unions and greater hisppiness. There should be more freedom of thought and action."
"May they not write?"
"A lady should be very careful what she writes."

"But are not ways and means devised? It is said that love laughs at locks and doors?"

"Oh, yes." Another of those smiles.
"While dancing and at other times a word or two. Sometimes the lady meets her lover at the window. The windows have protuding bars that extend to the ground. But this is not considered in good ground. But this is not considered in good form."

"Where measures are so strict one would think that inventive genius would contrive a means of freeing pent-up sentiment."

"In cities it is so, more than here. I "In cities it is so, more than here. I have received requests from lady friends in cities to call upon a certain evening. It was understood. The object was that while I entertained the mother, the lover could pour into the daughter's ear expressions of devotion and affection unobserved. This was very wrong. It is pure deception, and leads from bad to worse. I would never be a party to it."

"During that blissful period, marked by the banishment of doubt and the usurpation of anticipation, any falling off among the chaperons then?"

"Oh, yes! After they are engaged, they

"Oh, yes! After they are engaged, they may walk together and talk, and even go to the theater unattended without exciting comment. One thing is quite different from what I understood it to be in the States—that it is not proper for a lady to accept valuable presents from a gentleman prior to their marriage; but, as if to compensate for this, the gentleman provides the wedding dress for the bride."
"He does"

"He does?"
"He does. He enlists the services of some lady friend of hers, who goes with him, and they select the material, he payhim, and they select the material, he payfor it, the intended bride not being supposed to know anything about it until summoned to the dressmaker to be fitted."
"The lady, then has no choice as to texture or shade of the dress she is to wear upon the momentous occasion of her existence?"
"No. Not so at all. I said, and you remember, that she was not supposed to know. But, in reality, it would be something less than wise not to presume that she had been consulted, and her wishes conformed to."
"And the parents of the bride, they may conformed to."

"And the parents of the bride, they may contribute something?"

"To give their daughter. Is that not enough? They contribute nothing. The husband has to contribute to their support; but the parents may, and usually nusband has to contribute to their sup-port; but the parents may, and usually do, make presents of jewelry to the bride, as other relatives and friends do."

One other question occurred to me just then. There were points of doubt as to the law. Among the many who were charmed by this young commotatorarie was a successful American miner who was liable to put in an appearance of was a successful American miner who was liable to put in an appearance at any moment.

"Are American gentlemen usually as highly esteemed by Mexican ladies as those to the manner born?"

"Yes, Indeed," she replied quickly, then hesitating and blushing just enough to make it interesting, the fact being accepted among her friends that this same American miner stood a little better chance for her hand than the Mexican sultors, "it is not uncommon for them to be—to be—even preferred."

"And to return to gifts, might a lady with propriety present a gentleman friend of there a photograph of herself?"

be—to be—even preferred."

"And to return to gifts, might a lady with propriety present a gentleman friend of hers a photograph of herself?"

"Oh, yes; with perfect propriety, when satisfied that such a friend would feel complimented by such a gift, but that is a matter, which in the first place appeals to their judgment, for it is seldom that the friend actually requests."

"I am really charmed with such a custom as that. How designtful, for Instance, would a traveler be, one journeying in strange lands, meeting this one or that one by the mercet accident, fate turning upon electer, a knowledge of a mutual friend, and when they part, the prospect being that they part forever, how delightful, I say, it would for such a one to reflect that in euch a brief and transient acquaintance as theirs had been, he had inspired in her such a confidence in himself as would lead her reasonably to conclude that such a gift would be the source of great pleasure to him, when thousands of miles apart, and months, or years, of time had intervened, that he might refresh his memory of gazing up ft."

"Senor will please excuse me a moment," And, walking swiftly and gracefully into another apartment, the closing of a lid announced her return—holding by the right hand upper corner a counterfeit presentment of herself.

"My friends complain that this does not fatter me in the least, but in presenting it to you, I kope it may be the means of recalling the pleasure you have given me in listening so attentively to my recita of the little that I knew, the best I could. "Thunks! Thanks Thank for the pleasure. Thanks for the music; and thanks to the accident that permitted me to admire disc pures peard of Mexico."

In this measly melee of the metallists, argument on both sides has long since given way to slang-whanging and the calling of names, until we Eagle people, who are merely lookers-on without a place to put any kind of money if we had it, have lost all ability to make out the merits of the row.

It is only given me, as the feeble representative of the proud bird who adorns both the pallid dollar of your daddies, as well as the more aristocratic and hefty yellow boy who is great to buy with, that it is quite advisable to let us have a little peace as you go along.

Rend not your garments, good people, but if differ you must—and you generally must if there is the alightest show on earth, as I have frequently noticed—please, do so decently and in order. For, sly as you keep it, or rather as some keep it, there are one or two other things in the world besides money. There is the great republic which is growing bigger and greater every day, and there flies above at the blessed and beautiful baimer of stars. Don't forget these small items which are the splendid things to look out for.

It don't make a single tuppence worth of difference to me what money standard you have, one-legged or two-legged, yellow or pale, bimetallic or monometable, my only business is to see that you don't forget that whatever you conclude to make it, greenback, goldback or silverback, the hand of Uncle Sam is great enough to fight her way among the nations of the earth and eventually come out on top with any kind of money. That is the kind of a patriot the Eagle is.

A Flag Raising.

A Flag Raising.

Friday afternoon at the Swain-street school occurred the joint fiag-raising of the Swain-street and Arroyo-street schools. Both fiags were purchased by earlings and savings of the pupils.

The building was prettily decorated with mustard, roses and fiags; the pictures of Washington and Lincoln were decorated with ferns. In front of the building stood a kindergagien table, on which was placed a large American fiag made of rose pecals and myrtle. The ground was completely covered with cypress twigs and rose petals.

The programme consisted of patriotic songs, history of the fiag and appropriate recitations, followed by addresses from Dr. Clark, master of ceremonies; Messra. Haie and Pitman, members of the Board of Education; Prof. P. W. Search, Rev. J. H. Phillips and others.

A novel feature was the raising of the fiag, which was done by six-year-old children, a boy and a girl, who came from the rear of the building, drawing a little wagon nearly covered with roses. Within rested one of the flags on a bed of rose petals. They took their places at the rope, and sent the flag up to the top of the pole with a seal that would have done credit to older people. Many visitors were present.

"What do you want of the old musket on the Fourth, Hal? Going to celebrate?" asked young Burdick.

"I expect to do a little hunting tonight," returned Harry.

The Burdick boy brought out the old-fashioned shotgun, which had been an heirloom in the family for many years, and gave it to Harry.

"I have plenty of ammunition at home," said Harry, declining the proffer of powderhorn and shot-pouch.

"And a better shotgun than old Kfill-deer, too," returned Tom-Burdick. "Hal, I believe you are up to some mischief. Won't you tell me about it?"

"Yes," replied Harry, after a moment's hesitation. "Come over to our barn, Tom; I believe I can trust you, and I need a helper."

"To beat Old Sam out of his boots."

"Can it be done?"

"Yes. Listen to me, Tom."

Harry Gaines laid his plans before his boy friend, the latter listening with the deepest interest to every word.

"By gracious! Hal, I'm with you there!"

"I was over to Doward's playing with one of his boys. We'were in the barn when I heard them talking—old Sam and two of his men. They had a bottle of whisky between them, and drank from it every few minutes."

"Prepriaps it was the liquor that talked, Harry." suggested Mrs. Gaines.

"I don't think so. Old Sam was sober enough to know what he was talking about." declared Harry. "He argued that, as all of our millmen had gone off to Muskego to spend the Fourth, and father with an ax with which to cut the Gaines bowledges.

MOZART'S MARVELOUS MEMORY

Ifrem a Special Contributor.

There lived in the latter part of the sixteenth and in the beginning of the seventeenth century a priest by the name of Gregoris Allegri, a member of the same family of Correggio, the famous painter.

He was celebrated for his lovely character as he devoted himself to the poor of Rome and spent his leisure hours visiting prisons and pesthouses; but he is still more noted for the famous miserere for nine voices in two choirs, which for many years was sung annually during Holy Week in the Pontifical chapel. It is one of the most exquisite of all religious compositions, and so highly was it prized that it was considered a crime to copy it, punished by excommunication from the church.

When Mozant's father took his wonderful son upon his travels they arrived in Rome during Holy Week and went immediately to the Sistine chapel, where this boy of 14, enchanted with the beauty of the place and enthralled by the music listened so attentively that he was able to write down the entire work from memory. On Good Fridsy he put the manuscript in his little cocked hat and went to the service again.

This time, unknown to any one, he corrected one or two passages that were slightly incorrect with a pencil. The feat made a great sensation, and, strange to say, he was not reprimanded. Long afterward he sang and played his copy with the singer Christoforo, who had sung it in the Sistine chapel; and he pronounced it perfect in all its small details.

EARLY LIFE OF THE LITTLE

Destined to Reign for Over Half Century as Queen of Great Brit-ain and Empress of India.

Queen Victoria has attained her seventy-sixth year, and the fifty-eighth of her refgn, the longest on record in the history of En-gand, if we except that of her grandfather, gland, if we except that of her grandfather, George III.

In casting a retrospective glance at this period which extends over more than half a century, it becomes evident that Her Majesty already belongs to history, and one feels authorized to examine and form an opinion of her character, of the part she has played as a sovereign, and of the influence she has exercised on the affairs not only of Great Britain, but of the world at large.

charm and extent and planted with magnificant trees. It gave the filusion of a retreat far from the turmoil of the city, and very unlike its present aspect, buried, as it is, smoong the tail buildings that encompass at on every side.

The little Princess was "a splendid beby, fair and plump as a partridge," said her fond father, adding, when any intimate friend book her in his arms: "Look at her well and take care of her, for she will be Queen of England." Effectively none of the royal Praces having children, the Princess was presumptive heir to the throne.

The Duke of Kent died when his little daughter was only 8 mionths old. On her and by a bill passed in the upper and lower houses, the Duchess of Kent was named regent in the event of her daughter becoming Queen during her minority.

The Duchess was a woman of rare ac-complishments and a strict disciplinarian, gifted with a strong will. She adored her gifted with a strong will. She adored her child and was wont to say in French "C'est mon bonheur, mes delices, men existence, c'est l'image de feu roi (she is my happiness, my delight, my very life, she is the very image of the late King.) "Think of the baby," exclaimed Llady Granville, who relates this effusion: "George IV in petiticoats and so fat it can hardly wisdelle."

IV in positicoats and so fat it can hardly warddle."

But the determined character and severe principles of the Duchess countervalanced for maternal tenderness. The Princess never was a spoiled child.

The Queen and the English naiston have both recognized the good fruits of this early training. Still, in a private tester written by the Queen to her beloved uncle, Leopoid, King of the Belgians, she reminds him of the days they spent together at Cleremont and tells him "they were almost the only happy days of my sad youth."

were almost the only happy days of my sad youth."

In Greville's Memiors and other historical documents, we learn that neither George IV, nor William IV, nor indeed any member of the royal family liked much the Duchess of Kenk, whose prudence and sense of propriety esteemed the presence at court of a young, innocent girl, unfit and even dangerous, Moreover, Kings in general do not like to be reminded that they are subject to the common laws of humanity, and, in this particular instance, the two royal brothers were not allowed to forget that their crown would, one day, be worn by their niece.

On one occasion George IV. spoke of giving a children's ball in honor of the young Queen of Portugal, Donna Marie II. She and Princess Victoria were both 10 years old. On hearing of the King's plan Lady Maria, Conygham, the then trust in God that my life may be spared for nine months longer, after which period, in the event of my death, no regency would take place. I should then have the satisfaction of leaving the royal authority to the personal exercise of that young lady (pointing to the Princess,) and not in the hands of a person near me, who is surrounded by evil advisers and who is herself incompetent to act with propriety in the station in which she would be placed. I have no hesitation in saying that I have been insulted, grossly and continually insulted, by that person, but I am determined to endure no longer a course of behavior so disrespectful to me.

Among many other things, I have particularly to complain of the manner in which that young lady has been kept away from my court; she has been repeatedly kept from my drawing-rooms, at which she ought always to have been present; but I am fully resolved that this shall not happen again. I would have her know that I am King, and I am determined to have my authority respected, and for the future I shall command that the Princess do, upon all occasions, appear at my court as it is her duty to do."

What a scene! The Queen was in great distress, the Princess burst into tears, and the whole company was aghist. As for the aggrieved and insuited Duchess of Kent, she said not a word, but announced her immediate departure and ordered her carriage.

However, a sort of reconciliation was

she is even described as "rather a stubborn child," and from the moment of her advent to the throne, she plainly proved she had "a will of her own." This matural disposition joined to her perfectly correct attitude as constitutional Queen so often compelled to sacrifice her opinions and her ideas to act in conformity with the fundamental taws of the land, make these concessions on her part all the more worthy of admiration.

When the Princess attained the age of 5, the Duchees of Kent appointed Dr. Davys (afterward Bishop of Peterborough) as her tutor; he does not disguise the fact that the characteristic firmness occasioned by the determing organization from which spring most of the good and evil actions of the line of Brunswick, showed itself in the little Princess; but almost disappeared, leaving her perfectly docide on all points, save that of taking medicine! Still she was willing to compromise matters to some extent, on condition that the doctor drew upon his budget of interesting stories—to which she was always very partial. On one occasion, however, she was told he had no more to relate; she had heard them all. "Well, can't you make one up?" said she. "Ah! but then it would not be true," rejoined the physician. "Ch! that does not matter," eagerly replied the Princess, "very few are; that is why they are called stories."

HER WIT AND TACT. HER WIT AND TACT.

HER WIT AND TACT.

One day, for instance, when she was reading before her tutor how Cornella, the mother of Gracchi, introduced her sons to the Roman ladies with the words "These are my jewels," the Princess remarked, "She should have said, 'My Cornellans.' "On another occasion, when she was on a visit at the royal ledge, her uncle, George IV, entered the drawing-room leading his little niece by the hand. "Now, Victoria," said His Majesty, "the band is in the next room, and shall play any tune you please; what shall it be?" "Oh! uncle," she promptly replied, "I should like 'God Save the King' better than anything else."

With the same ready and graceful tact the little Princess soon discerned, if she had a favor to ask or a request to make, it was especially agreeable to the Duchess of Kent when lisped in German, her native tongue, and, although the child at first spoke English and French more fluently she invariably used the Teutonic idiom to caress and coax the maternal ear.

HOME LIFE OF THE KENTS Simplicity and self-possession were the principles upon which the Duchess proceeded in the education of her daughter.

The household was always astir early. If, perchance the Princess's own maid was absent on a holiday, the Duchess party at dessert, and at 9 o'clock she retired to her bed, which was placed near to her mother's.

The pretty child, with her large and expressive blue eyes, her blooming and transparent complexion, her glossy eilken blonde dair, a radiant countenance, which bespoke perfect health and good temper, was engaging and friendly. She used sometimes to ride a donkey gaily caparisoned with blue ribbons in Kensingtod gardens and would accost passers-by with a taking greeting of "How do you do?" or "Good morning." The people who stood to see her on the lawn, peering at her through the green railings, were generally favored with a kies of her hand.

Little Victorla was very truthful and always ready to acknowledge a fault. One morning the Duchess of Kent inquired of her governess, Baroness Lehsen, what was the general behavior of her pupil. She had not been very good that morning, whereupon the governess answered, "Oh, once she was rather troublesome." The little Princess gently touched her arm and said "No, Lehsen—twice; don't you remember?"

INCIDENT OF THE HAYCOCK.

Truthfulness, generous, self-sacrificing, unflinching devotion to the call of right and duty, deafness to the voice of self-indulgence and gratification, all the virtues which have characterized Her Majesty through life, are due, next to the excellent natural disposition, to this constant care of her devoted monitress and guardian. No desultory habits were allowed. The Duchess made it a rule that the Princess should finish whatever she was doing before beginning anything else. One day as she was playing at hay-making she

What a scene! The Queen was in great distress, the Princess burst into tears, and the whole company was aghast. As for the aggrieved and insuited Duchess of Kent, she said not a word, but announced her immediate departure and ordered her annediate developed for companions of her own aga. GOOD AMERICAN STORIES GATHERED IN THE COURTS OF THE FAR EAST.

The Ups and Downs of California Nabobs-How a Millionaire Died for Three Cents—Thirty-five Kisses at $100 Apiece—Senator Jones and George R. Hearst—The Little Emma Mine and the Renowned Comstock Lode.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

One of the brightest Americans who ever went out to Asia is Gen. Clarence Great-house, who is now the foreign adviser to the King of Korea. Gen. Greathouse comes from one of the oldest families of Kenas a San Francisco lawyer and a newspa-per editor. He was at one time owner of the Examiner, and shortly after he sold his he was appointed Consul-General to Yokohama. He took the position in order to have a vacation in Japan, and left it to go to Korea. During his stay in California he was closely associated with the greatest of the mining millionaires there. He had heard wonderful tales of the gold mines of Korea, and I imagine that the real reason for his acceptance of his present position at the Korean court was that he might in some way learn about these he might in some way learn about these gold mines, and get a concession for them. I know Gen. Greathouse very well, but I ve no authority from him for the above statement. He is a shrewd, far-seeing man, however, and it will not be surprising if he one day comes back to the United States a millionaire. At present he is living in the city of Seoul, where he has a magnificent establishment, and lives in a magnificent establishment, and lives in right royal style. The King has honored him in every possible way. He has the rank of a noble, and he rides about the city in a chair carried by four servants in livery, and accompanied by soldlers. He puts on a great deal of dignity in his intercourse with the Korean officials, but at home he is the same frank, open Westerner that he was when he was only a common citizen in the United States. Gen. Greathouse is one of the best story-dellers among our public men, and his mind is packed with goesip and tales about the California militonaires with whom he has been so closely associated. It was one night last summer, when we were sitting together on the veranda of his palace, with a couple of Korean servants near by to light our pipes and fill our glasses that we began to talk of old days in California. HOW A MILLIONAIRE DIED FOR A MILLIONAIRE DIED FOR

HOW A MILLIONARE DIED FOR THREE CENTS.

The conversation turned to the miserly economies of rich men, and Gen. Greathouse asked me if I had ever heard how one of the greatest millionaires in California was killed by brying to save 3 cents. I replied I had not, and he went on:

"It was the famous Michael Reese, whose estate patnesd out $14,000,000. You have certainly heard of Michael Reese. He was enormously wealthy, and they used to sing a song in the dance saloons of San Francisco, every verse of which ended something like this:

"When Michael Reese was a German Jew, who had ortiginally been a peddler in Virginia. He came out to California and invested in all sorts of things. He bought a great deal of real estate at low prices. It rose in value and made him very wealthy. I met his nephew in Yokohama during my sury there, and he told me his estate had amounted to $14,000,000, and that Reese had left the most of to his relatives in Chicago. He said that he had left $1,000,000 to one charity in that city, and he told me that be had left $1,000,000 to one charity in that city, and he told me that be had left the beneficiaries under the will. Reese had been a very economical man all his life. With all his millions he could wealthy. I met his nephew in Yokohama during my sixy there, and he told me his estate had amounted to $14,000,000, and that Reese had left the most of it to his relatives in Chicago. He said that he had left $1,000,000 to one charity in that city, and he told me that he himself was one of the beneficiaries under the will. Reese had been a very economical man all his life. With all his millions he could not bear to spend umoney. He grew sick in his old age, and it almost broke his heart when the doctors ordered him off to Carlsbad to drink the watters. He went there, however, and tried to skimp on his living. He lived at the cheapest of the restaurants, and frequented the free-lunch counters, where you pay so much for your coffee and cait all the bread you want with R. Now, there was a park mear Carlsbad which Michael Reese liked to visit. He had lived near this place in his boyhood, and, I think, there were some old associations connected with it which led him to want to go libere frequently. It was a private park, however, and the gatekeeper had a charge amounting to whout 3 American cents for admission. Michael Reese, so the story goed, could not bear to spend this money, and he slipped around to the back of the park and climbed over the wall. He was seen doing this, and when he came again a polecuman was on hand to arrest laim. He saw the policoman and man, but he was caught and brought before the authrovities. The exertion of running and the morutification of being arrested for such a mean act are said to have rere the author-lifes. The exertion of running and the morrification of being arrested for such a mean act are said to have caused his death. Fourteen millions of dollars ought to have given him an income, at 5 per cent., of meanly $2000 a day, but he died for 3 cents."

ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS FOR A KISS. "Michael Reese was a queer character," Gen. Greathouse went on. "He was full of perve and he would not be imposed Gen. Greathouse went on. "He was full of perve and he would not be imposed upon. I remember one case in which a woman tried to blackmail him. He had had some association with her, and she brought suit against him for breach of promise. She placed her demands at thousands of dollars. Michael Reese defended the suit. He denied that he had ever promised to marry ter, and refused to give her a cent. When the trial came, according to the laws of California, either party to the suit had the right to call the other party to the stand as a witness. Reese was called by the coursel of the woman. He again denied having given any promise of marriage. He admitted that he had known the woman, however, and upon being asked if he had ever kissed her, he showed his remarkable memory in the reply that he had, and that this lips and hers had come together just thirty-five times. He was too honest to commit perjury, and the judge assessed the damages at just $3500, or $100 for each kiss. Reese thought this was very high. He had a great deal of business with different clients, as he had a large number of houses to rent. After this case he never saw a woman alone in his office, and the moment one entered the room a clerk had directions to come in and remain as witness during her stay. He was a man of good sense, and was true to his friends. Though he hated to lose small sums, he could lose large amounts and not be affected. When the Bank of California failed and Raiston committed suicide Reese lost $500,000. He never made a countyint. He simply said that Mr. Raiston was a good man, and that he a complaint. He simply said that Mr. Ralston was a good man, and that he could afford to lose the money. HOW SENATOR JONES REFUSED A

FEE.

From Michael Reese, the conversation turned to Senator Jones. Gen. Greathouse the says that Jones is one of the brightest men who ever came to California, and that he is as plain as an old aloe, notwithstanding his coormous wealth. Jones is worth his tense of millions. He came to the West poor, and had a number of ups and downs, before he got into the Comstock fode, which made his first fortune. He had been mining for some time before but had speculated, and was practically a bankrupt. He gradually amassed some money, and then got into the Cown Point mine of the Comstock fust before the second bonanza was discovered. The Comstock lode, all told, turned out about $40,-000,000 worth of ore, and the Crown Point made Jones a milliomaire. Having said this much, by way of introduction, Gen. Greathouse told the following:

"It was at this time when some Boston capitalists paid their first visit to the West. They came on the first train over the overland route, and, in passing through Newada, they stopped to see these wonderful mines. When they arrived at the Crown Point mine they found a little fat man, with a fair complexion and bright eyes, in charge of it. He had on! dirty clothes, and he looked like a miner. They, told him that they wanted to see the mine, and he replied that he would gladly take them through. He spent half a day with them, taking them from one part of the mines to another, and showing them all of the processes. At the end of the trip one of them called the remainder of the party off to one side, and, after a few moments' whispering, this man oame to the bright-eyed little miner and offered him a dollar. The miner looked at it a moment, and at last asked: What is this for?"

"Oh, replied the Boston capitalist, you have been very kind to us today. You have spent the whole morning with us, and bave gone to a great deal of trouble in showing us shout the minee. We want to give you this as a sort of a testimonial of our graditude. You need not object to taking it, for we are well-to-do; and can afford it.

"How much are you worth?" said the miner.

"How much are you worth?" said the miner.

"I don't know," replied the capitalist, he put his thumbs in the armhole of his vest. 'I should say that my assets would figure up at least $150,000, and I am perhaps, the poorest man in the party."

"Well," replied the miner, who, by the way, was 0ff. Jones, 'I don't think I ought to take this from you. I like money, I appreciate the value of a dollar. But it is only fair to tell you that my income is now $250,000 a month. On the whole, gentlemen, I really don't think I ought to take the his dollar."

STORIES ABOUT THE LATE SENATOR STORIES ABOUT THE LATE SENATOR

HEARST. "You must have known George Hearst very well, general," said I. "Yes," re-plied Gen. Greathouse, "the late Senator plied Gen. Greathouse, "the late Senator Hearst and myself were strong friends. I was his legal advisor for years. Hearst was a really great man. He was a rough diamond, but ha was a solitaire of the purest water. I first met him in 1870, and I was associated with him, more or leas, up to the time of his death. Hearst was born in Missouri, about sixty miles from St. Louis, along late in the twenties. He came overland to California in 1851, with about $100 in his pocket. He went into the mines as soon as he got to California, sometimes dandling the plek for others for wages, and sometimes working his ower claims. In this way he soon learned all about mines, and he eventually became the best judge of mines in the West. It was not long before he made a strike which atted him $15.000. He soon lost this, and again went to work for wages. When the Comstock was discovered in Newada Hearst was still working in the mines of California. He thad already become known as an expert miner. Some of the Comstock gold was brought to him, and his opinon was asked as to R. He assayed it, and the regult was that he decided to go to Nevada and look at it. He had some money saved. This he took with him, and he bought a good many feet in several locations along the lode. He began to mine, and he sent several mule loads of ore to San Francisco. At this time there were no mills near the Comstock, and these loads brought him $80,000. The Comstock was then thought to be a gold mine, but it turned out 55 per cent of gold, and the remainder of the ore was silver. Well, Hearst remained here for several years, and then came back to San Francisco with $800,000 or $700,000 ahead. He hovested this in real estate and mines. He bought a big ranch at San Luis Obispo, which contained 60,000 acres, which cost him $40,000, and made other good investments.

GEORGE HEARST'S MARRIAGE.

This was about 1859. He had now been away from home about eight years, and his life had been so busy that he had hardly written back to his people to tell them how he was getting along. It was so full of ups and downs that he said mothing about his business operations, and the family did not know whether he was poor or rich. About 1860 he put his business in the hands of an agent and went back to Missouri to visit his mother. The Hearsts were simple country people in Missouri, and when he came back home, bringing some presents with him it was thought by them that he might possibly be worth as much as $10,000. During his stay there was a picnic some distance from the place where they were living, and Hearst invited twenty or thirty people to go with him. To the horror of flis mother, he hired a special car for the occasion. She remonstrated with him upon his extravagance, but he told her he could stand it, and he afterward showed her how rich he really was. It was during this visit that he met his future wilf, Miss Phoebe Apperson. She lived near by. He fell in love with her and asked her to uparry him. He did not say he was rich, nor did he tell her parents of his financial standing. They decidedly objected to the match. They thought that California was about as far off as Kamschatka, and they forbade Phoebe to have anything to do with him. Miss Phoebe, however, was in love with George Hearst, and the result was a runaway match. Even after his marriage he did not tell his wife about his riches. She had an idea that he was only moderately well-to-do, and that they would live much like the families about them in Missouri. She expected to have to do her own cooking, especially after she had asked Hearst as to the price of servants, and was told that the poorest of them in California got from $40 to $50 amonth. She was, of course, greatty surprised when she arrived in California and found herself the wife of a millionaire. She was however, well fitted for the position. She was well educat GEORGE HEARST'S MARRIAGE.

SOME OF HEARST'S SPECULATIONS. "Few of the California millionaires had more ups and downs than George Hearst." more ups and downs than George Hears, "otherwise den. Greathouse. "When he red turned from this Missouri trip he found that his agent had made bad investments during his absence, and that he was about $500,000 out. The Comstock property had gone down, and the most of the balance of his money was in real estate. He went Por a time he made but little. He was just about able to pay his taxes and keep up his rent. So it ran on until about 1871; when he arranged with Haggin and Tevisto go into partnership with them, and to buy mines. They were to put up the money and he was to put in his experience and judgment as a mining expert. They relied principally upon him in this matter, and the result was that they made a vast amount together. I have known nearly every successful miner in the United States." continued Gen. Greathouse, "and I have met all of the prominent mining experts. I don't believe there was ever a man in the United States who approached Georgé Hearst in his knowledge of mines and mining. He seemed to be born for the business, and was an intuitive geologist and metallurgist. He knew how to work a mine, and the mines which he reported upon after examination as good seddom turned out otherwise. I know of instances in which he lost large eums of money in mines. On one mine he lost $460,000, and on another he lost $450,000, but these losses were during his absence, and from improper working. HOW HEARST JUDGED MINES.

HOW HEARST JUDGED MINES.

"I remember a curious instance of Hearst's mining judgment," Gen. Greathouse went on. "It was while he was in Nevada operating a mine which he sold to an English company for a good, round price. Englishmen had sent out experts to the United States to look into the property. These experts had found '4450,000 on the dump, and the prospects were good. They offered a good price for the mine. Hearst and his party had already cleared $200,000 out of the mine, and the others were much surprised when he advised the acceptance of the English proposition. They did accept it, however, and the Englishmen at once went to work to build the finest mill in the country. I was much surprised at the sale, and I asked Hearst why he had advised it. He replied that he had noted in the side of the mountain half a mile below the mine a rock strata running upward into the hill, and he had concluded that if this strata continued as far as the mine it would cut off the ore. If not, the mine would be one of the greatest in the country. It seemed to him, however, that the chances were against it, and he advised the sale. A short time after this the miners struck this strata. The mine played out and the English lost their money.

THE LITTLE EMMA MINE.

THE LITTLE EMMA MINE. "Another instance of Hearst's judg-ment," Gen. Greathouse continued, "was "Another instance of Hearst's judgment," Gen. Greathouse continued, "was shown in the Little Emma mine. This was the mine that created such a sensation in England, where Bob Schenck and others placed its stock to the amount of $12,000,000. It was not far from Sait Lake City, and I was with Hearst at the time he and a lot of English experts were tooking at it. The English experts said it was the greatest mine in the world, and some of them came nearly every night into Hearst's room to try-and get his opinion upon it. He said but little at first, but one night I heard him advise one of the Englishmen to go slow and be careful as to his report upon it. The expert, however, said he was satisfied that it was a great mine, and he so reported. The result was that it was capitalized for a vast sum and the stockholders expected to get from $25,000,000 to 550,000,000 of ore out of it. Hearst then told me that he thought the mine was like a turnip turned upside down. He said it would probably be found to be only a pocket or a large lump of ore, and that it would not last. The English experts thought they had a mountain filled with ore. The result turned just as Hearst predicted. They were working on the top of the turnip. They soon got to the bottom, and the result was that thousands were ruined. Bob Schenck was probably homest in his connection—with this mine, and I am told that he made nothing out of it. He was one of the directors of the mine, and as such he got $25 for every meeting he attended. I doubt whether he received any more than this."

As Gen. Greathouse said this the clock struck 1. The Korean servants were asleep. "Gen." Pak, his interpreter, was swinging in his chair, and his gutteral grunts awake us to the fact that we were not in Washington nor San Francisco, but more than 5000 miles away, from the United States on the east coast of Asia. The old saying that the best place to hear news of your own frome is to get away from it came to my mind, and in another eiter I may tell you of some other queer American romances which I heard in the far East. band a sapphire ring without the motive being questioned, because it is supposed to cure a man of drunkenness. The emerald will bring good health, and it should be worn by every doctor, for it will tend to make his medicines more powerful and his patients will get well sooner. Of the ruby, it is believed that a human soul is concealed at its very heart. This idea comes from India; the land of romance, and the devout Buddhist believes that it is a soul going through the agonies of purgatory, seeing again the sins that it has committed and realizing to what depths of wickedness it went. After a certain length of time this soul goes out of the ruby and enters into eternal happiness, and another poor soul takes its place. Personally, I do not think it is altogether pleasant to imagine that some-body's soul is on your finger, and that you are more or less responsible for its comfort, so'l prefer to regard the ruby as the beautiful stone that is symbolic of innocent love, and which is warranted, when worn by a woman, to keep her pure. The pearl is said to make a woman modest, and this is probably the reason why it is the only gem permitted to young girls. However, it is also symbolic of tears, but it does not seem right that pearis should be brought to any one who looks at life as if it were all sunshine. The reason children wear corals is because in the days when a fairy inhabited every flower and a demon every poisonous plant, the coral protected the children not only from the evil eye, but from eerpents who might otherwise, as they slept, creep up and bite them. In those days it was firmly believed that if a serpent saw a coral it became blind and could not move.

other floral designs, that came out most superbly at the time I saw them against a white satin bodice. This, by-tho-by, was at a reception given by President Harrison, and the story was told that a detective kept close to Mrs. Stamford wherever she went. Rubies are not appreciated here as they deserve to be. It is said of the Princess of Wales that she has the finest, collar of pearls in the world. This is arranged in five strings, fitted closely about the throat with clasps of perfect Burmese rubies at intervals of every ten pearls. Properly enough, one seldom sees diamonds mounted in earrings nowadays, for if a woman has a pretty sur she does not need a diamond to attract, attention to it, and if she has an ugly one, she ceralnly wants people to forget it and not be forced to criticise it because of the beauty of the stone resting against it. Russian women wear rather long, elaboratic earrings made of precious stones, but these are usually so exquisite in design that one forgives the barbaric taste which puts a hole through the sensitive flesh of a woman's ear, that she may presumably add to her beauty.
